75 Held in Riots As Czech Nazis Sweep Elections

Henlein Receives Strong Support in Second Communal Vote.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, May 29.—Nazi followers of Konrad Henlein and German Socialists rioted today at Eibendero, near Graslitz, in Czechoslovakia's troubled border region.

A Henleinist was injured seriously and three Socialists were wounded slightly before order could be restored with the arrest of 75 rioters.

This was the only serious disorder reported on the second Sunday of voting in communal elections which have been regarded as a test of Nazi political strength among Czechoslovakia's 3,500,000 Germanic minority.

First returns showed Henlein's Sudeten German Party was polling from 80 to 95 per cent of the German vote, a proportion similar to that gained in last Sunday's elections.

In Gablonz, center of the Bohemian glass industry, the Sudetens polled 18,577 votes compared with 16,789 they received in the 1935 parliamentary elections.

German Socialists — anti-Nazi — had 566 votes as against 675 in the last elections. Communists received 805 compared with a previous 1,196.

Czech Parties Gain.

The United Czech parties showed an increase, getting 3,391 votes compared with 3,108 in 1935.

Thus the Sudeten Germans will have 34 Municipal Parliament seats in Gablonz, the United Czechs 6 and Socialists and Communists 1 each.

Citizens of 2,740 communities voted today. Communities which have not yet voted will ballot June 12, to complete the elections covering the entire nation.

Disorders on the eve of last Sunday's elections brought an ominous rumbling in the German press and German troop movements toward the frontier—movements which Berlin insisted were merely routine.

Talks Resumed.

Czechoslovakia responded with a partial mobilization and a hasty array of nearly a half-million soldiers and technicians along her frontiers, particularly the German, in fear that Hitler might choose invasion to enforce his declaration to "protect" Sudeten Germans from "suffering."

Yesterday the government and Germanic minority leaders suddenly resumed negotiations for settlement of their dispute.

Secret Police Whisk Him Away Northward From Castle.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, May 29.—Eyewitnesses reported today that German secret police had spirited Kurt Schuschnigg, deposed Austrian chancellor, out of Vienna's Belvedere Castle to "somewhere north."

These reports said the journey began at 8 p. m. yesterday, with Schuschnigg in one of three closed automobiles manned by the Gestapo.

A half hour later Schuschnigg's blond fiancee, 34-year-old Countess Vera Fugger von Babenhausen, and his father, a retired Austrian officer, also set out northward with luggage packed in two cars.

All police had been removed from the castle today and neighbors said

Swiss Arrest Head of U. S Narcotic Ring

Peruvian Ex-Consul Held for Reich Authorities; Syndicate Smashed.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, May 29.—Arrest of a former Peruvian diplomat, wanted by American authorities and the police of many nations as key man in a huge international narcotics smuggling ring, was disclosed today by Harry J. Anslinger, United States narcotic commissioner.

Anslinger declared the former diplomat, Carlos Fernandez Bacula, was arrested Saturday by Zurich police.

The United States delegate to the League of Nations Opium Committee, Anslinger said American officials held Fernandez Bacula responsible for a large part of the narcotics smuggled into the United States for the last eight years.

Treasury Department operatives have been trying to get him "for years," he said.

Swiss police kept the arrest secret, but Anslinger revealed the Peruvian was apprehended at the request of German authorities for extradition to Vienna.

Until two years ago Fernandez Bacula held a diplomatic passport as Peruvian consul at Vienna, but then he was ousted from the Peruvian diplomatic service and disappeared.

Anslinger asserted the Peruvian was connected with Ian Dosco, now a prisoner in Sing Sing, and "Little Augie" Del Gracio, who is serving a term in the Hamburg, Germany, prison for smuggling narcotics.

He also connected the former consul with Edouard Agrarich, former Argentine consul, who killed himself at Bucharest in July, 1937, after being arrested on a narcotics smuggling charge.

"Fernandez Bacula is known to us as one of the biggest men in the narcotic business," Anslinger said. "His arrest smashes a ring which did an enormous business both in the United States and Europe, and is the severest blow dealt the illegal drug traffic in the United States in many years."

Canton Raids Leave 4,000 Slain, Injured

Southern City Aflame as Planes Scatter Death on Civilians.

By the United Press.

Canton, China (Monday), May 30. With more than 1,000 already dead and at least 3,000 injured as a result of Japanese aerial bombings, Canton was terrorized again today when 20 Japanese warplanes raided this South China seaport for the third time within 48 hours.

The attacking planes this morning apparently concentrated on government buildings north of the central part of the city.

Immediate estimates of additional casualties and damage were not obtainable.

Huge areas of the densely populated city were in smouldering ruins from the two previous attacks.

Just before noon yesterday 21 bombers flew over the panic-stricken city in the second raid and dropped 60 bombs on the thickly packed Chinese sections, killing between 300 and 500 civilians and injuring more than 1,000.

British Tars Land.

Terror spread to Shameen Island, the foreign section of Canton, where British sailors were landed to hold back thousands of Chinese who fought to escape to the comparative safety of the international zone.

Hundreds of persons were buried in smouldering debris, and fire was spreading through the Wongshan Station area, the chief target of the Japanese raiders and one of the most densely populated sections of Canton.

Pillars of flame shot up from the thickly populated Kinyuan district, where several government buildings were shattered. Flimsy structures in the native sections went up like tinder, burning scores to death.

A municipal primary school was hit directly by a bomb and the bodies of 40 persons, mostly school children, were dragged from the ruins. A United Press correspondent who toured the area saw 10 bodies pulled out of the still smouldering building within 10 minutes.

The second Japanese raid was carried out while rescue crews still were digging through smoking ruins for victims of Saturday's bombing raid, in which more than 600 were killed.

Fires from that raid, which burned throughout the night, had hardly

4 Mothers Tied In 'Stork Derby' Receive $75,000

Toronto, May 29 (Canadian Press) Executors of the Charles Vance Miller estate announced tonight that checks for $75,000 each had been paid to the four winning mothers of the Toronto "stork derby."

The lawyer's bizarre will left his estate to the mother bearing the most children in the ten years following his death.

The $75,000 to each is only a "first payment," it was announced, since part of Miller's estate remains to be liquidated.

The mothers were Mrs. Kathleen Nagle, Mrs. Annie Smith, Mrs. Isabel MacLean, and Mrs. Alice Timleck, each of whom bore nine children.

Hermosa Beach, Calif., May 29 (AP).—Lifeguards rescued 185 movie extras, both women and men, who became exhausted trying to swim with their clothes on to qualify for minor roles in a gambling ship picture here today.

More than 500 took the test, which was to swim one-fourth mile around the pier. In the film a gambling barge will be set aflame and sunk, with 300 patrons jumping into the water.

$1,000,000 Pie Firm Folds—A. F. L. Blamed

Unknown Woman in a Locket Is Key to Civil War Mystery

A tiny gold locket which some Union soldier carried with him when he went to fight—and die—in the first Battle of Manassas, was discovered on the eve of Memorial Day by Mrs. Dolly Peyton Shepperson in her home at 907 Prince street, Alexandria.

Scarcely as large as a quarter, the locket contained the picture of a kindly woman's face, a photograph still clear cut. Neither locket nor photograph bore any inscription.

Mrs. Shepperson yesterday told how a wounded Confederate soldier, convalescing at the home of her grandparents, the late Capt. and Mrs. William Pauli, in Lynchburg, Va., had given the locket to her mother, then 9 years old. He told the girl, Maria Champe Carter Pauli, that he had taken it from the pocket of a "dead Yankee" just before they buried him.

Maria, later Mrs. James F. Peyton, treasured the locket up to her death a year ago. She frequently expressed the wish that copies of the face in the locket might be published in an effort to locate the family of the dead soldier.

Yesterday Mrs. Shepperson remembered her mother's wish and asked that the picture be published on Memorial Day, for the dead soldier, the woman in the locket, and the family who might recognize the picture and recover the heirloom.

Wheeler Tells Chiefs to Shun Primary Wars

Says 'Meddling' Will Spell Loss of Presidency in 1940 Elections.

By the Associated Press.

The Administration received a warning yesterday from Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, that the Democratic Party would lose the Presidency in 1940 unless Roosevelt leaders quit taking sides in the party's primary contests.

Wheeler, who led the Democratic revolt which beat President Roosevelt's court reorganization bill last year, declared Harry Hopkins' intervention in the Iowa primary had widened the breach between party factions. He added in an interview:

"If these government officials are going to continue to inject themselves into primaries between Democrats, it can result in only one thing—the splitting up of the Democratic Party and the possible defeat of Democratic candidates in November.

"The Administration indorsement of primary candidates is creating a schism in the party which, unless it is healed, will not only affect the 1938 election, but will likewise affect the Presidential election in 1940."

WPA "Politics" Charged.

Wheeler asserted Administration intervention in primary contests "undoubtedly will tend to help very materially a third party, such as that which has been inaugurated by Governor La Follette, of Wisconsin."

"It could develop into a question of whether there will be a third party candidate or an Old Guard Republican coming into power in 1940," he added.

The Montana Democrat's previous criticism of Hopkins, the WPA administrator, for indorsing Representative Wearin for the Iowa Democratic Senatorial nomination, touched off a series of charges in the Senate last week that "poli-

Recovery Bill Vote Thursday Is Senate Hope

Wage-Hour Measure to Be Only Controversial Bar to Adjournment.

Senate passage of the Administration's spending-lending recovery bill by Thursday, leaving the wage-hour bill as one big controversial bar to adjournment, was the goal held yesterday by Senate Majority Leader Barkley.

Ending of the session June 10 still was seen by the Kentucky Senator as a possibility, but the chief danger to such a program, it was conceded, lay in the measure that attempts to put a floor under wages of the Nation's workers and a ceiling on the number of hours in a work week.

Both Houses in Recess.

In addition to these measures, both houses must pass the deficiency appropriation bill, which probably will sail through to quick enactment when finally drafted and given committee sponsorship. The bill, expected to carry in the neighborhood of $300,000,000, will require another week for preparation by the House Appropriations Committee.

Both houses are in recess today, and President Roosevelt is holidaying at his Hyde Park home, but legislators and Chief Executive will be back on duty tomorrow.

King to Press for Inquiry.

The Senate then will resume debate on the recovery bill, under a limitation on debate, with Administration forces insisting that the measure will be enacted in substantially the same form that passed the House. Anti-New Dealers of both parties, hurling charges of political use of the relief setup, are driving to earmark the appropriations for specific purposes and agencies.

There were indications that the Senate would see more of the fierce

President, Royal Guests Hear Girl's 'Sermon' on Greatness

By the Associated Press.

Hyde Park, N. Y., May 29.—America's first family, with their guests—Prince Louis Ferdinand and his bride, the Princess Kyra—today attended a church service befitting Memorial Day, and heard a lesson on what constitutes true greatness.

At St. James' Protestant Episcopal Church, the Rev. Frank R. Wilson, rector, read a paper by an unidentified girl, member of St. George's Church, on the East Side of New York. Asked to put down her idea of greatness, the child had written:

"Once there was a woman that had done a big washing and hung it on the line. The line broke and let it fall down in the mud, but she didn't say a word, only did it all over again, and this time spread it on the grass where it couldn't fall.

"But that night a dog ran over it. When she saw what was done, she sat down and didn't cry a bit. All she said was 'ain't it queer that he didn't miss nothing.'

"That was true greatness, but it is only people who have done washing that know it."

President Roosevelt drove in the warm sunshine to the Memorial Day service in the roadside worshipping place, which has a sign in front: "The Church of the President."

Every Creed Joins Tribute To War Dead

Roosevelt Sends Wreath to Be Laid on Unknown Soldier's Tomb at 11.

With 35,000 week-end visitors in the Capital, the national observance of Memorial Day will be climaxed at 11 a. m. today when a wreath sent by President Roosevelt will be laid on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington.

All faiths joined with patriotic organizations yesterday in holding religious services throughout the city to honor the war dead.

Four services were held at Washington Cathedral concluding with the People's Evensong at which the Right Rev. James E. Freeman was the preacher.

Field Mass Held.

A field mass, celebrated by the Rev. John K. Cartwright, of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, was held in Mount Olivet Cemetery, under the auspices of Lincoln Camp, No. 2, Sons of Union War Veterans, Catholic War Veterans, Irish War Veterans and Col. James S. Pettit Camp, No. 30, United Spanish War Veterans.

Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, made the principal address at exercises at St. Elizabeths Hospital under the direction of the United Spanish War Veterans.

"We should all support organizations which tie us together," he declared. "Many of us have been anxious during the past few days and we need unity in the coming years. We should not favor any one nationality or nation; we should just be Americans. We should also stand for a reasonable and adequate national defense establishment so that in the years which lie ahead we may be ready for any crisis."

Cool weather was forecast for today with intermittent showers.

Senator Walsh to Speak.

Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, will be the principal speaker at services in Arlington Amphitheater at 1:30 p. m. Music will be provided by the Marine Band and Mario Cozzi, Metropolitan Opera barytone. James G. Yaden, president of the Grand Army of the Republic Memorial Day Corporation will preside.

Md. Sniper Misses D.C. Physician With Volley at Rockville

Dr. L. T. Wagner, of the La Salle Apartments, 1028 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday escaped uninjured when a mysterious sniper fired a shotgun at the car in which he was riding with his wife and baby near Rockville, Md.

About 40 slugs struck around the open window next to Dr. Wagner who was driving the car, police said.

His wife, who was riding in the rear seat with their son, Reggie, in her lap, was not in the line of fire.

"The shots just missed my arm which was resting on the window ledge," Dr. Wagner said last night. "It's all a complete mystery to us. We don't know whether the person firing the shots mistook us for someone else or was out hunting or what."

Rockville police, who visited the scene of the attack after Dr. Wagner reported the occurrence, were unable to locate the assailant. They estimated the shots were fired from approximately 100 yards off.

Homer Martin Warns Politicians About War

New York, May 29 (AP).—Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers, warned political factions today to handle carefully the question of war or they will find "the unanimous opposition of labor arrayed against them."

He expressed the fear the depression would be used as an excuse for war, and said the "establishment and maintenance of a strong, intelligent, responsible labor movement" was the greatest insurance for peace.

Hands and Feet Also Are Missing

Identity Is Established by Clothing; Father Is in Seclusion.

By the Associated Press.

New Rochelle, N. Y., May 29.—The wire-bound body of long-missing Peter Levine—head, hands and feet missing—was found and identified by detectives tonight on the shore of the estate of Louis Iselin on Davenport Neck, Long Island Sound.

The body was in an advanced state of decomposition, but Detectives Edwin Gleason and Michael Lynch said enough of the lad's clothing remained to make identification possible.

Helmer Strong, 47, yacht captain employed by Mrs. Iselin, was standing on the shore when, he said, the wind blew the body landward and lodged it against a rock.

The 12-year-old boy, son of Murray Levine, a Fifth avenue (New York) attorney, disappeared from his home here February 24 after leaving school. Almost immediately, the father received a note demanding $80,000 ransom, but payment of the money was never made.

Torso Bound With Wire.

The body was taken to the George T. Davis Memorial, an undertaking establishment. Gleason said a copper wire was found about the torso, part of it binding down the remains of one arm. He said he believed the kidnaper, after failing to contact Levine, had become panicky, bound the boy and thrown him into the water.

There was no indication immediately, he said, that death occurred before immersion, but an autopsy was begun to determine this. Dr. Robert Lateiner, assistant city physician of New Rochelle, said he would determine if the boy had been "poisoned," but did not give any reason for suspecting that this might have caused death.

A squad of Federal investigators, who became active in the case after March 14, when the father abandoned all efforts to get in touch with the abductor, arrived soon after the body had been brought in.

Father Away on Trip.

The boy's father was not at home at the time. A telephone call to the home brought word from Peter's sister, Helen, 10, that her parents were away. A servant said Levine was en route to Chappaqua in upper Westchester County on an undetermined mission.

Levine was reached later in the evening and returned to New Rochelle, going immediately into seclusion. He made no public statement, but George T. Davis, undertaker, said Levine had informed him he would not view the body tonight and that he would make funeral arrangements later. Reed Vetterli, FBI head in New York, said the father might not attempt to make an identification at all.

It was an ironic twist that the father, who had remained so close in the vicinity—at times shutting himself up for days while he made frantic appeals by telephone and radio for the return of his son—should be absent at the tragic end.

He had offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to the safe return of the boy, setting a deadline

Holt Attacks, Thomas Backs Housing Plans

High Costs Are Assailed by West Virginia Senator in Radio Debate.

Senator Holt (Democrat) of West Virginia, last night attacked high costs of Federal housing activities in a radio debate with Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, who advocated enactment of the relief-recovery proposal to increase slum-clearance and low-cost dwelling activities by $500,000,000.

Emphasizing he was not hostile to "efficient" Federal housing operations, Holt charged the Government already had put more than $7,000,000,000 in many forms of these activities and that average costs of the projects were higher than those of private homes in 36 States.

Holt said the housing operations were benefitting the "few rather than the many" because poor tenants could not afford the rentals. He warned that the Government must cease unbridled spending or all property valuations would be impaired.

He asserted housing projects of the Public Works Administration had cost $1,169 a room, or $4,126 for a family dwelling unit, exclusive of the cost of sewerage and utility connections. Units of the Arthurdale (W. Va.) Homestead Project cost an average of $15,343, he said.

But Thomas, who as chairman of the Senate Education and Labor Committee will handle the legislation, argued that the proposed amendments to the Wagner-Steagall act were essential to halting the depression.

He explained that the proposal, which would permit the United States Housing Administration to enter into project contracts totaling $1,000,000,000 instead of the present $500,000,000, and would relieve cities of paying 1 per cent of development costs, would create 20,000 homes for the poor, furnish 600,000 jobs and stimulate the flow of private capital.

Bullitt Says War Would Ruin Ideals Dead Fought For

Suresnes, France, May 29 (AP).—United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt, speaking in a Memorial Day service in the American Soldiers Cemetery in Suresnes, warned today that "war in Europe would be the ultimate defeat of all hopes for which they went out to die."

"We cannot be sure their graves may not soon be torn by bombs and shells," he told thousands of Americans and Frenchmen gathered in the cemetery to honor the American World War dead buried here.

Wagner Assails Jews' Persecutors

New York, May 29 (AP).—Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, today called anti-Semitism the "beastliest manifestation of human degradation." He spoke at the forty-third annual memorial service for Jewish War Veterans after a parade of 5,000 persons down Fifth avenue.

"What a tragic paradox it is that the very countries whose misguided leaders now persecute the Jewish people were the homelands of some of the greatest Jews," he said.

Representative Samuel Dickstein (Democrat), of New York, declared there was "no room in this country for goose-stepping."

Foreign dictators are using foreign money to undermine the great American traditions and institutions of liberty and freedom for all under a democratic form of government," he said.

President Roosevelt will be urged to name George Allen Ham as District Commissioner succeeding George Allen, who has resigned the post, it was announced yesterday.

Ham is credited with working out several plans for improvement of traffic conditions here while associated with the American Automobile Association. He is an enthusiastic yachtsman. Formerly sales director of an automobile agency, Ham recently has been assistant manager of a local hotel.

Radcliffe and Holt To Speak at Rites

United States Senators George L. Radcliffe, of Maryland, and Rush Holt, of West Virginia, will speak today at Memorial Day services at Antietam Battlefield Park, near Sharpsburg, Md.

Maryland's senior Senator, Millard E. Tydings, will speak at commemorative services in Taneytown, Md.

Other memorial services have been scheduled for Annapolis, Cumberland, Edgewood and other cities in Maryland. Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, a candidate for the governorship of the State, is scheduled as principal speaker at Edgewood.

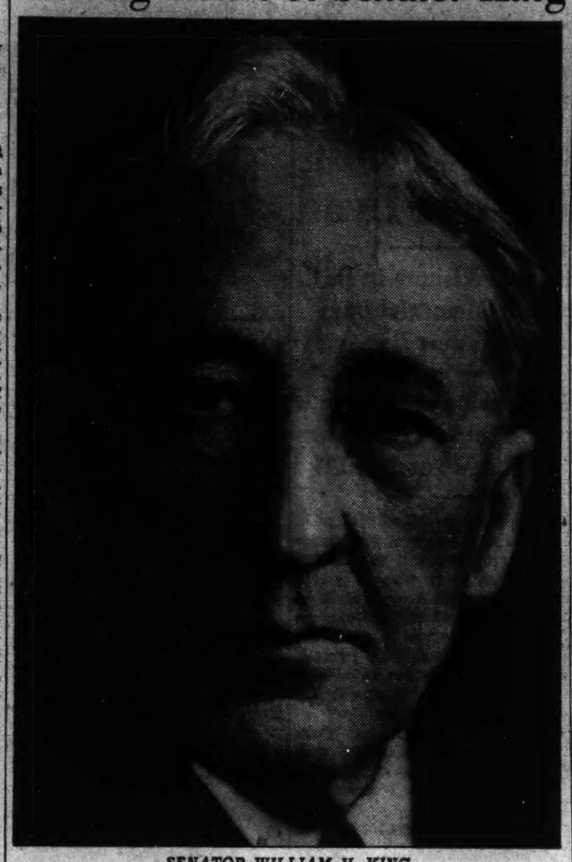
Johnson Says U. S. Must Stand Guard

New York, May 29 (AP).—Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson warned today that the Nation "must stand on guard," so long as "some members of the family of nations make force and the threat of force their national policies."

Speaking at Memorial Day exercises at Forest Park, Long Island, Johnson said "there are sinister forces at work, principally of foreign origin, that would erect ideological frontiers between our citizens, pit neighbor against neighbor, undermine our American spirit of tolerance and understanding and destroy our union by propaganda."

Working for Washington

More Power to D.C. Triumvirate Long Desire of Senator King



SENATOR WILLIAM H. KING.

By Christine Sadler

More power for the District's three Commissioners, in order that they might be more nearly the "actual representatives of the people," has long been the desire of Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee.

"I think it would be a help to the residents, but I never get any local support for the idea," says the tall Utah Senator, who could have been chairman of committees more nationally prominent, but who has stuck to the District post during the "fat" Democratic years just as loyally as he did during the Republican era.

When he first came to Washington as a Representative, in 1897, King was put on the District Committee. When he came back as a Senator in 1917, he received a similar assignment. He was named chairman when his party came into power in 1933.

"I shouldn't have accepted it, I'm sure," he declared last week. "I may ask to be relieved at the next session."

But Washingtonians need not become too scared at such a threat. Senator King — overworked and committee-ridden though he be—has a warm spot in his heart for the District committee and is rightfully proud of what he has been able to accomplish for the Nation's capital.

Advocated Trolley Merger.

He was one of the earliest advocates of the street railway merger, and was instrumental in obtaining legislation creating the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and in working for the improvement of Potomac Park. He led the move to get Maryland interested in developing her part of Rock Creek Park, and many years ago advanced purchasing land on both sides of the Potomac up and including Great Falls. When he arrived in the city, the population was only 208,000—but the trend was westward and he urged that development of the outlying areas be in accordance with the plan worked out for the downtown vicinity.

"I predicted then that Washington would become a city with 1,000,000 inhabitants," he declares. "I still predict it will."

The next big surge, Senator King says, is toward the east. He's tickled that the new Pennsylvania avenue bridge is assured and predicts that the southeastern section of the District is the coming region.

"I think we ought to turn our attention to the east," he says.

He sees the Fort Drive around the city as an additional boost to that area, and has been interested in its development.

To Study Penal Situation.

When Congress is adjourned Senator King plans to spend a month in the District visiting schools and playgrounds and studying the delinquency situation.

"I will not be satisfied until we get another penal institution, so that we can separate the hardened criminal from the beginner," he says. "The situation is illustrative of that throughout the Nation. I have prepared a resolution which I will offer before adjournment, asking for appointment of a committee to work with the Attorney General's office to study the prison and crime situation of the country.

"During the summer I will travel over the United States and see what is being done. No more important problem is before us now. Reform, rather than punishment, is what I am interested in—especially for the juvenile. How to prevent his becoming the hardened criminal is the problem."

On Wednesday—Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, new president of the Washington Council of Social Agencies, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Marine Band Plays.

The colors, massed on the stage during the observances, were carried in procession under the direction of William G. Stirk, chief color sergeant, before and after the exercises. Musical selections were rendered by Miss Marjory League, Miss Elsie Jorss Rilley and the Marine Band. The Rev. William M. LaRoche, V. F. W. department chaplain, offered the invocation and benediction.

Father Cartwright, in his sermon at the military mass, drew attention to the fact that Memorial Day coincides with the octave of Ascension Day, "which recalls the ascension of the Lord and our own eternal destiny."

An honor guard was formed by St. John's College Cadets, who fired a salute at the consecration, while drums were rolled by the Knights of Columbus Boys Band. Members of the Boy Scout Troops from various parishes also assisted at the exercises.

Michael Casey, commander of the Irish War Veterans, had charge of arrangements for the services, at which Representative Frank W. Towey, of New Jersey, delivered the principal address.

Other speakers included William I. Jenkins, past commander of Lincoln Camp, No. 2, Sons of Union Veterans; George L. Lange, commander of Pettit Camp, Spanish War Veterans, and John J. Moriarty, commander of Francis J. Hurney Post, No. 112, Catholic War Veterans. C. J. McAuliffe, of the Irish War Veterans, was the officer of the day. Edward McGrory commanded the honor guard. George A. E. Prendergast and Edward Ahern were colorbearers. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Thomas A. Calnan, of St. Michael's Church.

Flowers on River.

Other services yesterday included strewing of flowers on the Potomac River by Robert E. Peary Ship, Veterans of Foreign Wars; the United Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary and the Women's Relief Corps; exercises at Soldiers' Home Cemetery under the auspices of the District Department, United Spanish War Veterans Auxiliary and the American War Mothers, and observances in Harmony, Woodlawn, Payne, Lincoln Memorial, by James R. Europe and James A. Walker Legion Posts.

Exercises in Fort Lincoln Cemetery were under the direction of Stephen P. McGroarty Legion Post, while those at the Water Gate were sponsored by the Women's Relief Corps, which also held services with the Richard J. Harding Camp, United Spanish War Veterans, in Glenwood, Prospect Hill and St. Mary's Cemeteries.

Mexican Urges Economic Unity By Americas

More active exchange of resources among the American republics was called for last night by Mexican Foreign Minister General Eduardo Hay. He also upheld "the intention of not intervening, either directly or indirectly, in the domestic problems of other countries."

He spoke from Mexico City on a Pan-American program over the Columbia Broadcasting System. The broadcast included addresses from Washington by Don Andres Pastoriza, minister from the Dominican Republic, who spoke on the Columbus memorial lighthouse, and Dr. Don Henri DeBayle, minister from Nicaragua, who urged a customs union among the five Central American states.

Economic Co-operation.

Dr. DeBayle declared that the five republics, "bound by undeniable ties of every kind are destined to form in the future, as we did once in the past, a single nation."

Gen. Hay praised President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy and urged American nations to show that good relations of international friendship "are incomplete if, when converted into reality, they are not associated with the sincerest economic co-operation."

This, he added, should seek to eliminate hindrances "on the free play of our vital activities, and endeavor to introduce methods for speeding up actively exchange of resources, so that prosperity may shed its benefits on all.

Policy of Good Friend.

"This," the Mexican said, "would be the most efficient means of drawing us closer together and of carrying into practice that policy of the good neighbor advocated by the President of the United States, to be the standard that shall govern relations between the American peoples on a basis of closest co-operation.

"The policy harmonizes with and is supplemented by that other which I, more than two years ago, ventured to call the policy of the good friend, and which I described as the urge spiritually to share the triumphs and anxieties of our sister nations, and the basic intention of not intervening, either directly or indirectly, in the domestic problems of other countries, by observing in substance and in form the most absolute respect for the course pursued by their existence, and their domestic organization.

Path of Brotherhood.

"Only by virtue of these principles, I firmly believe, will it be possible to promote the growth of friendship and harmony between the nations, and such conditions once established, America's unanimous aspiration to keep peace and relations between its peoples on a basis of dignity and mutual aid, will be strengthened.

"In consequence, we may rest assured that this continent of ours will not only be in a position to achieve a fruitful and happy life, but also to point out to the world the true path of human brotherhood and international duty."

government and Nazi demands for autonomy under Hitler's "protectorate," were included in today's voting.

A delegation of 100 American Slovaks observed elections in 22 communities of Slovakia, the eastern part of the nation.

Bringing the famous Pittsburgh agreement from America, the delegation arrived at Ruzomberok (Rosenburg) yesterday to visit the Rev. Andreas Hlinka, aged leader of the Slovakian autonomy movement as head of the Slovak Catholic People's Party. To him they presented the historic agreement.

(The agreement, signed in Pittsburgh June 30, 1918, embodied an accord among Czech and Slovak societies in the United States on the principle that Czechoslovakia should grant "cultural self-government" to Slovaks.)

Goebbels Warns Prague.

Dessau, Germany, May 29 (AP).—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels today told a huge party demonstration Germany "holds peace as necessary as it does bread," but warned against further violations of the German frontier by Czechoslovakians.

It was the first public statement on the troubled German-Czechoslovak situation by a high Nazi official.

"What should we say to continuing border violations by Czech warplanes?" asked Goebbels. "In the end isn't one of these incidents bound to exhaust our patience?

"We are 75,000,000 strong. Czechoslovakia is 12,000,000 or 13,000,000. Yet she acts as though the situation were just the reverse . . ."

Bonnet Optimistic.

Paris, May 29 (AP).—Foreign Minister Bonnet canceled week-end appointments today to keep in touch with the Czechoslovak municipal elections at his Quai d'Orsay offices. He said he was optimistic concerning the mid-European situation.

Free City of Danzig, May 29 (AP).—Nazi leader Albert Forster told a party rally at nearby Zoppot today the Nazi Party had absorbed the last remaining opposition in Danzig's parliament, leaving 70 Nazis and two Poles in the chamber.

Norris Advises TVA to Hasten Its 'Yardstick'

Sees 'Difference' on Morgan Contention on 'Hidden Subsidies.'

By the Associated Press.

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, said yesterday he believed the Tennessee Valley Authority should hasten its allocation of power costs on TVA dams so that a definite yardstick for measuring private electricity rates could be fixed.

Norris said a "difference of opinion" was involved in the contention of Dr. Arthur Morgan, ousted TVA chairman, that TVA received "hidden subsidies" through the canvassing of prospective customers, by the Electric Farm and Home Authority and county agents, and through publicity given the public power venture by speeches of President Roosevelt and members of Congress.

Norris acknowledged that privately-owned power companies must spend large sums in building up their power sales before they can fix their rates at a point of profit. The same factors should be considered in fixing TVA rates, he said.

The Nebraska Senator, who is the Congressional father of TVA, said the allocation of power costs on TVA dams would have to be more or less arbitrary.

"Despite all the difficulties and the complexities involved," Norris added, "I, for one, think that the final yardstick on power costs to be set for the TVA is going to be amazingly low. And I hope that it can be fixed soon."

Recovery Bill Vote Thursday Planned

Congress

political debate that marked last week's consideration of the recovery measure.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, declared yesterday he would press the resolution he introduced on Saturday calling for a thorough investigation of politics in relief. But, while the effort appeared certain to bring forth hot argument on both sides of the chamber, there was little prospect of its ultimate adoption.

Majority Leader Barkley will insist, it was indicated, that his own resolution for the customary campaign funds investigating committee will provide sufficient inquisitional activity. The committee provided for, he points out, will have authority to investigate the misuse of any public funds—Federal, State or local—as well as private expenditures in the interest of any Senatorial candidate.

The regular inquiry was an outgrowth of the William S. Vare (Pennsylvania) and Frank L. Smith (Illinois) elections, in which both of the men elected were denied Senate seats because of the lavish use of funds in their campaigns. The Senate has acted under the constitutional provision that it is the judge of its own membership.

Senator King maintains that the Barkley resolution by no means authorizes the investigation he seeks. He calls for a wide inquiry into phases of WPA administration, especially those that could be said to have political objectives. He would inquire into charges of the use of relief funds for political purposes, and the reported placing of Communists in charge of some offices, as well as the often-hurled allegations of waste.

Meanwhile, the House is expected tomorrow to name its conferees to carry on the struggle over the wage-hour bill. In conference committee, the wide difference between the House and Senate bills must be reconciled, a task that promises long-drawn controversy and verbal fireworks.

The Senate bill, permitting wage differentials in favor of the South, clashes on that point, with the House measure establishing uniform minimum wages and maximum hours for all sections. Senator Barkley avoided a floor fight, after passage of the House bill, by naming two Southern Senators—Ellender, of Louisiana, and Pepper, of Florida—and thereby giving the South its only representation on the Senate conference group.

If the conferees' report fails to include geographical wage differentials, a filibuster is generally expected, with Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, being most frequently mentioned to lead it. On the othe rhand, should the conferees include the concession to the House, there would be a strong fight against House acquiescence in their report. It was pointed out that previously the House had shelved, by recommitting, a wage-hour bill that provided for the differential.

It was made clear again yesterday that further consideration of the President's project for reorganization of the executive branch of the Government was not being planned by those in charge of the program for the rest of the session. The most persistently repeated report—that the Senate might be induced to bring up the reorganization bills already passed by the House—brought from Senator Barkley the emphatic assertion that such action was not on the program.

2 Reich Fugitives Called Spies In Drastic Federal Warrants

Dr. Griebl and Air Expert Gudenberg Would Face 20 Years in Prison If Caught and Convicted; Four Bremen Sailors Still in Reach.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 29.—The return from Europe of two key figures in the United States' spy investigation was sought today by Federal agents following the issuance of warrants charging the pair with violation of the drastic World War espionage act.

Conviction under the act would mean 20-year prison terms for Werner George Gudenberg, who specializes in aviation defense secrets and who was employed at a Bristol, Pa., plane factory, and Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, a former German army intelligence officer, named in warrants obtained by United States District Attorney Lamar Hardy.

Hardy Suspects Pressure.

Hardy, in disclosing issuance of the warrants and attempts to have the men intercepted at European ports, said both had been Government witnesses and had been aiding the Government in its efforts to smash the spy ring. Both, he indicated, apparently fled the country under duress from hidden superiors.

Gudenberg, Hardy said, slipped aboard the liner Hamburg at midnight last Wednesday after he twice testified before the Federal grand jury.

[The captain of the Hamburg-American liner Hamburg admitted today when the London Daily Herald telephoned him at sea that Werner George Gudenberg was aboard the vessel, but would give no other information, the United Press said.

[When a personal call was put in to the Hamburg for Gudenberg himself, the telephone service reported, Gudenberg was not on the passenger list.—Editor's note.]

Escape in France Feared.

Only 15 days had elapsed since Dr. Griebl had departed without a passport on the liner Bremen.

An urgent request was sent to French officials at Cherbourg to intercept Gudenberg. It was feared, however, the master of the Hamburg may decline to honor the arrest warrants, following the example of Capt. Ahrens, of the Bremen, who refused to surrender Dr. Griebl on the grounds that the American vice consul failed to present proper papers.

Authorities faced the problem of having to go to trial eventually with a number of those who may be indicted beyond the reach of American law.

Still within American jurisdiction were four members of the crew of the Bremen—including William Boehkne, scar-faced "fuehrer" of the ship's crew, who were released on a total of $40,000 bail as material witnesses after spending a night in the Federal House of Detention.

O'Connell to Seek Jersey Invasion By House Liberals

A concerted invasion of Mayor Frank Hague's Jersey City by 25 House liberals will be proposed to the group at a meeting tomorrow evening by Representative O'Connell (Democrat), of Montana, who twice has failed in moves to speak there. Any such move, however, must be made this week, the Montanan said, since he expects to return home.

O'Connell said he would see President Roosevelt and Democratic National Committee Chairman Farley in order to "get something done" about alleged infringement of civil liberties in Jersey City.

Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, made it clear that he would not be one of the liberals going to Haguetown, if any go.

"I am not going to do any busting into windmills in this part of the country," he said. "I'll do my riding ni Texas, where we have plenty of windmills of our own."

Father Riordan, District Pastor, Made Monsignor

The Rev. Michael J. Riordan, of St. Martin's Church, yesterday was invested with the robes of a monsignor, half a century after he preached his first sermon in St. Peter's in Rome.

Following the investiture at 11:30 mass yesterday with the Right Rev. John McNamara, Bishop of Baltimore, officiating, Mgr. Riordan celebrated solemn high mass. The Rev. Dr. Louis Motry, dean of canon laws at Catholic University, preached the sermon.

The Pope signed a document creating Father Riordan a monsignor April 12, and he was notified of the appointment two weeks ago.

A native of Piedmont, W. Va., he was educated at St. Charles School in Baltimore and the North American College in Rome. He celebrated his first mass in the parish church where his father and mother had worshiped in Ireland. He has been pastor at St. Martin's for the past 15 years.

Pennsylvania's Democrats Set Peace Parley

Meeting Is Called to Heal Wounds Left by State Primary Battle.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., May 29.—A peace parley, probably Tuesday, was planned today by the Democratic State organization in a move to heal wounds left by the recent primary election campaign.

The meeting was called to discuss a basis for alignment between the State organization, whose candidates were swept to nomination in the primary, and the faction of Senator Joseph F. Guffey and C. I. O. Chieftain John L. Lewis, whose ticket was defeated.

Announcement that the conference would be held in Philadelphia came on the heels of a statement yesterday by State Democratic Chairman David L. Lawrence that "the air would be cleared" within a week.

Still Tight-lipped.

John B. Kelly, coleader of the Philadelphia Democratic organization, declined to say who other than leaders of the State organization would sit in on the parley.

The overtures for peace found Guffey and Lewis still tight-lipped over their plans.

Lawrence's prediction that the party would present a united front to the Republicans in the November election came after a three-hour conference with Edward N. Jones, campaign director for Thomas Kennedy. Kennedy was the Guffey-Lewis candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Silent on Terms.

Lawrence declined to discuss what terms might be involved in the move for party peace.

Meanwhile, another unsuccessful candidate on the Guffey-Lewis ticket—Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia—asked the La Follette civil liberties committee to investigate what he termed "disgraceful conditions" in the Keystone State's primary.

He asked that the committee determine why thousands of voters were "disfranchised" and "who controlled the collection of money from WPA workers, State workers and Government employes."

Attaches of the committee replied at Washington that Wilson's request would be taken under advisement this week.

Nazi Police Spirit Schuschnigg Away

Austria

the home which Schuschnigg had occupied as chancellor must be emptied by next Tuesday.

No official statement was available, but some Nazi officials believed the 40-year-old Schuschnigg might have to face trial before the Leipzig Supreme Court.

Others, however, believed Schuschnigg's health was too impaired for imprisonment at Leipzig Penitentiary and therefore he might be permitted to live under heavy guard in a sanatorium.

Another source reasoned that Schuschigg's removal was necessitated by numerous letters threatening to "lynch him," while in others friends assured Schuschnigg they would attempt to free him in the near future.

Last week a close friend of the former chancellor disclosed Schuschnigg had suffered a nervous breakdown in Belvedere Palace, where he had been detained since Germany annexed Austria.

A few days previously a responsible government spokesman said Schuschnigg's situation had become more serious with discovery of documents linking him with the execution of several Nazis in 1934.

Countess Vera, a talented musician, had been the only person permitted to visit him daily.

National Park Finals Address By Mrs. Rohde

Ex-Envoy to Denmark to Speak to Graduates 25 Years After Father.

Ruth Bryan Rohde, former American Minister to Denmark, will deliver the commencement address at National Park College, Forest Glen, Md., at 10:30 a. m. Thursday, 25 years after her father, William Jennings Bryan, addressed the graduating class of 1913. The class will hold its twenty-fifth reunion this week.

Mrs. Rohde's subject will be "Opening Doors," a discussion of the progress of women during the past quarter century.

Commencement exercises for students of the preparatory department will be held at noon Wednesday. Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives and member of the college advisory board, will give the address. Diplomas will be awarded at both graduation programs by Dr. Roy Tasco Davis, president of the college.

Parents Entertained.

Following baccalaureate services yesterday, with the Rev. William S. Abernethy, of the Calvary Baptist Church in Washington, delivering the sermon, students entertained parents, friends and alumnae with tea in the campus sorority house.

Today's program includes a horse show in the afternoon, sponsored by alumnae, and a play, "Call It a Day," to be given by Alpha, Beta, Delta and Kappa sororities. Other major events of the week will be an alumnae dance Tuesday night, featuring awards of athletic trophies and other prizes, and the class day program Wednesday afternoon and evening.

The Graduates.

Junior college graduates are:

Winifred Ashner, Detroit, Mich.; Frances Baerman, Pittsburgh; Mae Tillie Baldwin, Rochester, N. Y.; Marie Bender, Memphis; Jean Dale Bird, St. Joseph, Mo.; Martha George Bowers, Mannington, W. Maj. Gillis, Long in Chevy Chase, Dies

Maj. Harry Alexander Gillis, 67, died yesterday at his home, 3711 Military Road northwest, Chevy Chase.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Wednesday afternoon, to be followed by military rites at Fort Myer chapel. Burial will take place in Binghamton, N. Y.

A native of Erie, Pa., Maj. Gillis graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1883. His naval career cut short when Congress permitted only ten members of his Annapolis class to be commissioned, he became connected with the Erie Railroad.

He moved to the District in 1908 and for a number of years acted as Washington representative for a large British steel firm. He was commissioned a major of ordnance during the World War. He retired from active business life in 1932 because of ill health.

He held membership in the Temple-Noyes Masonic Lodge, the Abou Ben Adhem Lodge of the I. O. O. F., the Chevy Chase Club, the Chevy Chase Citizens Association, the Engineers Club of New York and the Sojourners, and he formerly belonged to the Army and Navy Club. He was elected a fellow of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers last year. He belonged to the Central Presbyterian Church.

Surving are his wife, Mrs. Emma Hanford Gillis; a son, Hanford; a grandson, Bruce Alexander, and a brother, L. N. Gillis, all of Washington, and another brother, Lieut. Comdr. Irwin Gillis, U. S. N., retired, of Peiping, China.

Hitler Wants Pact With England, U.S.

London, May 29 (U.P.).—Adolf Hitler, in an interview published today in the tabloid Sunday Graphic, says he wants an understanding embracing Germany, the United States and Great Britain to solidify world peace.

The interview was said to have been given to Edward Price Bell, British journalist, before the outbreak of the German-Czechoslovak crisis a week ago.

French Applaud Hull Czech Stand

Paris, May 29 (U.P.).—French officials tonight interpreted the declaration of Secretary Hull, reminding Germany and Czechoslovakia of their obligations under the Kellogg-Briand Pact against war, as strong support for the Anglo-French entente.

'Flying Lab' Ready.

San Diego, Calif., May 29 (A.P.).—The American Museum of Natural History's $250,000 "flying laboratory," constructed here for exploration work in the wild interior of New Guinea, will take off Wednesday on the first leg of an 8,000-mile flight to Hollandia.

Girl's 'Sermon' Heard in N. Y. By Roosevelt

scendant of Russian czars, and the President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, sat with the President in the quaint, old pew occupied by many generations of Roosevelts. Behind them were the First Lady, in tailored suit of blue, the President's son, James, with his wife, Betsy, and other members of the family. All around were neighbors—old friends of the man in the White House. A few tourists dropped in to complete the congregation.

The rector led the congregation in a service for the Memorial Day week-end. He prayed for the soldiers in the field and the sailors at sea. He prayed also that this country would not have to use them at war, but that if it did they would have heavenly guidance. One of the hymns sung was "America."

In one request for divine aid the President's rector asked help "to put away all bitterness and misunderstanding."

After the services, the President rode in his open car back down the Albany Post road to his mother's home, where he had for luncheon guests Theodore Steinway, Eric Gugler and Henry Junge, all of New York. Later the Presidential party motored to Val Kill cottage on the Roosevelt farm.

Marvin H. McIntyre, one of Mr. Roosevelt's secretaries, left the President's entourage this afternoon for Atlanta, where he will receive an honorary degree of doctor of laws Tuesday at Atlanta College of Law.

Fanless Sally Fails As Church 'Draw'

Kansas City, Kans., May 29 (U.P.).—Sally Rand, bubble and fan dance artist, ascended the pulpit of the First Congreational Church today to plead for "spiritual and practical" assistance for the Spanish loyalists. A disappointingly small crowd attended the early morning service.

G. A. R. Leader Urges Veterans Of Civil War to Bury Hatchet

By the Associated Press.

Lowell, Mass., May 29.—"Uncle" Dudley L. Page, this city's most active G. A. R. veteran and junior vice commander of the State unit, has what he thinks is a new angle on Memorial Day.

Let the North and the South, for one thing, bury the hatchet for good—particularly the women folk, for this white-haired, 92-year-old veteran of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg insists:

"It's the Daughters of the Confederacy who won't let bygones be bygones. The women still call us 'damyankees.' The Southern boys have forgotten about the fighting long ago, just like our boys, and we ought to be having bully times together."

To prove how he feels about it, he will attend the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg next month to chin about campaigns with his old buddies of the Thirty-third Massachusetts Regiment, which he joined as a farmer boy from Tewksbury.

He had some other ideas as he donned his old blue uniform for Memorial Day.

Let young people stop muttering about hard times and pioneer like Civil War veterans did when they pushed Westward during the reconstruction, Page suggested. He came back from the war, started a little side-street taffy shop and built it up into a big candy business, he said.

Denies Charges.

Macon, Ga., May 29 (A.P.).—Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, denied tonight her organization had kept alive sectional illfeeling between the North and South.

Mrs. Lamar replied to an assertion by "Uncle" Dudley L. Page, Lowell, Mass., G. A. R. veteran.

The U. D. C. president declared it was an aim of her group to show justification of the Confederate stand.

Texans Try to Get Cotton Laboratory Put in Their State

A group of 30 prominent Texas citizens will arrive in the Capital today seeking to induce Government officials to situate the proposed million dollar Federal cotton research laboratory in their State. The cotton laboratory is one of four such agricultural institutions provided in legislation now before Congress.

Senators Bilbo (Democrat) of Mississippi, and Connally (Democrat), of Texas, already have engaged in a verbal duel on the Senate floor over which of their States will be selected for the undertaking.

Heading the delegation, which will remain here through Wednesday, are Director A. B. Conner of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station system, and Burris C. Jackson, chairman of the Texas State-wide Cotton Committee and president of the Texas Cotton Association.

36 Strikers Held In Raid on Plant With Clubs, Knives

Baton Rouge, La., May 29 (U.P.).—Thirty-six strike sympathizers, charged with raiding the Consolidated Chemical Industries, Inc., plant in violation of a United States district court injunction, tonight were held for hearing in New Orleans tomorrow.

The 36 were arrested after 90 men, carrying clubs and knives, last midnight rushed into the chemical plant and attacked the 18 men on duty.

Sheriff's deputies hurried with sub-machine guns and tear gas bombs from Baton Rouge and caught 34 of the raiders in the plant. Others escaped over a wire fence. Plant officials later identified two who were not caught in the plant as participating in the attack.

Ex-Judge Tate, I.C.C. Counsel, Is Dead at 56

Native of Morristown, Tenn., Served Here for Eight Years.

Former Judge Hugh M. Tate, 56, until a year ago a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, died last night at his home, 3221 Macomb street northwest.

A native of Morristown, Tenn., he served on the chancery bench of that State before President Hoover appointed him to the commission eight years ago. During the last year he has been serving as special counsel for the commission.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Clara Hill Tate, and six children—Edward, Clara, Hugh M., jr., Emily, David and William, all of this city. One sister, Mrs. E. C. Eckel, of Morristown, also survives.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor, afficiating. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mrs. T. J. Sullivan Dies Here at 93

Mrs. Thomas J. Sullivan, 93, a resident of Washington more than 75 years, died here yesterday after a long illness.

Born at Pittsburgh, September 5, 1844, the daughter of Mary McTighe and Martin Connolly, she came to Washington in 1862. In 1874 she was married to the late Thomas J. Sullivan, one time director of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

She is survived by a daughter, Mary Eleanor Sullivan; a son, Francis P. Sullivan; two sisters, Misses Anne and Genevieve Connolly, and two brothers, Thomas A. and Anthony Sullivan, all of Washington. She was the mother of the late Joseph P. Sullivan, professor of law at Georgetown University, and the late Thomas V. Sullivan, president of the Federal Color Laboratories in Cincinnati.

Requiem mass will be sung at St. Paul's Church, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, tomorrow at 9 a. m.

Mrs. William Dodd Funeral Set Today

Funeral services for Mrs. William E. Dodd, wife of the former Ambassador to Germany, will be held at the Dodd farmhouse at Round Hill, Va., at 4 p. m. today. Burial will be at Round Hill Cemetery.

The Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, Washington, will conduct the services.

Pallbearers will be Fleet Jones, of Purcellville, Va.; J. S. Patterson, H. H. Cooley and W. B. Curtis, all of Round Hill; Lowell Mellett, of Alexandria, and Alfred K. Stern, of New York City.

The former Marth Johns, of Auburn, N. C., Mrs. Dodd was found dead in bed Saturday morning by Dr. Dodd, who became alarmed when she failed to appear for breakfast. She was 63 and had been in failing health for more than a year.

Following are some of the outstanding kidnapings since Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., was stolen from his Hopewell (N. J.) home March 1, 1932:

Charles Boettcher 2d, Denver; April 15, 1933; $60,000 ransom paid. Returned alive.

Peggy McMath, Harwichport, Mass.; May 2, 1933; $60,000 ransom paid. Returned alive. Kidnapers convicted.

John J. O'Connell, jr., Albany, N. Y.; July 7, 1933; $40,000 ransom asked; returned alive.

Brooke Hart, San Jose, Calif.; November 9, 1933; found dead; suspected kidnapers lynched.

Alice Speed Stoll, Louisville, Ky.; October 10, 1934; $50,000 ransom paid. Kidnaper convicted.

Charles Mattson, Tacoma; December 27, 1936; unsolved.

Charles S. Ross, Chicago; September 25, 1937; $50,000 ransom paid; found dead; kidnaper sentenced to be executed.

Dr. James I. Seder, Huntington, W. Va.; November 1, 1937. $50,000 ransom asked. Kidnapers executed.

Levine Home, Scene of Kidnaping

of June 15, with a $5,000 reward for the body.

Not more than three weeks ago two boys, fishing near the spot opposite Fort Slocum where the boy was washed up today, reported sighting a body, and a woman motor boating in the sound also said her craft had struck a body. Police searched the area, but found nothing.

Police said identification of the body was made principally from a sweater and a maroon windbreaker Peter wore when he dropped from sight one afternoon after telling a schoolmate he was going to a hardware store.

The windbreaker, Lynch said, bore the initials "C. W." on an Indian head, representing "Camp Wigwam," a camp Peter had attended.

On March 2 a note in Peter's handwriting, begging his father to ransom him, was found in a vacant lot near his home. Two days later, Levine said "the last note" he had received, demanded $30,000.

Seven persons in several nearby States were arrested, and several were convicted on charges of trying to extort money from Levine on the pretext they could return Peter.

Reports poured in from distant States saying the boy had been seen—but each proved false.

Fond of G-Men Lore.

Bright, imaginative and a good scholar, the boy was in the seventh grade. He was fond of the lore of G-men, and this at first led some to think he had not been kidnaped but had gone on a youthful adventure.

Two clergymen offered to act as intermediaries to pay the ransom. The first was Rabbi Abraham Nowak, near whose synagogue the note from Peter was found. The second was the Rev. Francis J. H. Coffin, who broadcast a Nation-wide radio appeal for the kidnapers to contact him.

Early in March the finding of a message scrawled in the snow on the shores of Indian Lake in the Bronx started a fruitless search of the basin.

In accordance with Levine's wishes, State and Federal officials remained out of the case until March 14, leaving the way clear for contact with the abductors. The first action by authorities was distribution of a circular by the Federal Bureau of Investigation asking the Nation to assist in finding the boy.

City Employes Mobilized.

On March 15 the New Rochelle police mobilized all city employes for a search of 400 vacant houses and all wooded areas and vacant lots in the community. In subsequent searches, the city workers were joined by 2,700 Boy Scouts and other volunteers.

About April 1, Levine made another appeal to the kidnapers to communicate with him. He guaranteed "complete safety to the person who will deal with me." In another week Levine repeated his appeal ad announced Mr. Coffin as his intermediary.

The same day Rabbi Nowak disclosed he had refused to keep an appointment with the kidnapers "because I felt that our meeting could not be exclusive and without interference."

On April 9, Boy Scouts searching for Peter found a toy typewriter of the kind used in writing the ransom notes, but it, like an earlier one, was discarded as a clew.

In another fortnight Levine offered $5,000 for information leading to the recovery of the body.

Clothing Found in Shack.

A flurry of activity stirred Morristown, N. J., on May 14, when some child's clothing was found in a shack where a few days earlier a note was found reading:

"Help; held prisoner by bandits. Peter Levine."

The double find, however, proved worthless, and a ragpicker arrested in connection with it was absolved.

Only a week ago one of two youths who munched sandwiches at a Dallas, Tex., tavern was incorrectly "identified" as Peter.

Brick Slaying Confessed by Colored Youth

Second Suspect Is Seized as Chicago Police Link 2 Killings.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 29.—Confessions that he slew one Chicago woman with a brick and was present when another was similarly killed, were attributed today by the authorities to Robert Nixon, alias Thomas Crosby, 19-year-old colored man.

Assistant State's Attorney John Boyle said Nixon confessed last night he bludgeoned Mrs. Florence Thompson Castle, 24, a night club hostess, to death in her hotel room June 29, 1936, and was in the home of Mrs. Florence Johnson, 34, wife of a city fireman, when she was beaten to death with a brick last Friday morning.

Nixon, police said, was implicated by fingerprints in the killings April 4, 1937, of Mrs. Edna Worden and her daughter, Marguerite, 12 in Los Angeles. Boyle said he confessed entering Mrs. Johnson's South Side apartment to rob the place, but named Earl Hicks, 19, another colored man, as the slayer.

Hicks, who was arrested last night, accused Nixon as Mrs. Johnson's slayer, the prosecutor said, declaring Nixon struck the woman when she awakened and screamed.

Mrs. Castle was slain in the presenceof her 7-year-old son Jimmy. The case took a mysterious turn when investigators found the words "Black Legion" scrawled with lipstick on a mirror in Mrs. Castle's room. Police said Nixon admitted he was the man who wrote on the mirror.

Meanwhile, police said, they were advised by Los Angeles authorities Nixon's fingerprints corresponded with those found at the scene of the Worden killings. Nixon denied any connection with the Los Angeles crimes, Detective Chief John L. Sullivan said. Likewise he denied a dozen attacks on other women in that city.

Fingerprints furnished the link with the slaying of Mrs. Castle, Sullivan said. He said partial prints left in Mrs. Castle's room tallied with Nixon's.

Nixon is also suspected of the slaying of Miss Anna Kuchta, student nurse in a Chicago hospital, who was raped and beaten to death with a brick on August 20, 1937, but Prosecutor Boyle said he would not be questioned further about this crime until details of Mrs. Johnson's death were cleared up.

Mr. Collins And The N. T. S. G.

A question arises as to whether Representative Collins is fully aware of the dilemma surrounding the National Training School for Girls.

"You could send a girl to Vassar for what it costs to keep a girl at the school," he is reported to have said. In this he appears to be relying on outdated and abnormal figures. A year ago an extensive construction program was under way at the school. More than half of the girls had to be moved out for a time. Operating expenses, however, remained virtually constant. Evidently Mr. Collins' figures apply to this period. At any rate, the cost per girl has now returned to the normal for such institutions.

Nevertheless, Mr. Collins persists in his plan to close the school and move its dominant Negro population to the Industrial Home for Colored Children at Blue Plains. This would mean a mingling of boys and girls, at least in the dining hall and classrooms. Children of both sexes are accommodated at the Industrial Home for White Children, but they are of a similar age and degree of delinquency. In contrast, the boys at Blue Plains are generally young and relatively mild offenders; the girls at the Training School are considerably older and more seriously maladjusted.

Moreover, to transfer 60 girls to Blue Plains would be an expensive, not to say slow, process. It has been suggested they might be placed in temporary buildings. Even if these could be built by June 30, it would mean pouring an estimated sum of $35,000 down a rat hole. Another proposal is to move 40 boys into foster homes, leaving their quarters vacant for the girls. But if there were 40 boys who could properly be placed in foster homes, they would already be there, since foster home care is cheaper and more satisfactory than institutional care.

To install the girls in new and permanent buildings at Blue Plains would cost $350,000, District officials estimate. The construction would take a year at least; the largely white staff of N. T. S. G. supervisors would have to be changed; and, worst of all, the present Conduit road buildings, in which some $225,000 has just been invested, would be left empty. It has been suggested that the Industrial Home for White Children, disadvantageously located on Wisconsin avenue, might be moved to Conduit road. But the Conduit road buildings have insufficient room for 125 children; nor does the topography of the grounds permit the recreational facilities needed for boys.

In view of these difficulties, Mr. Collins would seem best advised to second the Senate sub-committee which recently completed a special inquiry into the Training School problem. It recommended granting the $59,500 needed to carry the institution through the coming fiscal year while a comprehensive child welfare program is being drafted by an expert available to the Board of Welfare.

A Real Golfer.

If there were any devotees of the "wee sma' ba'" so wanting in enthusiasm as to have been kept off the links by yesterday's weather, they at least could find good reading about their sport. Seldom since Helen Wills won the world's tennis title at the age of 21 has American sport had a victory to compare with that scored by young Charley Yates in winning the British amateur golf championship.

Lady Luck helped him to the extent of making him an American, one of that race peculiarly favored to win British golf titles. But that was 24 years ago. And Saturday at Troon it was all up to Yates. He'd had a difficult enough time earlier in the tournament, what with two extra-hole matches to play and one of them with the redoubtable Cyril Tolley. To make it even harder, his putter was fooling him on the first eighteen. But he rallied magnificently in the afternoon and slowly wore down the tenacious, hard-hitting Irishman opposing him.

It was Yates' first experience in British tournament play. Not even Emperor Jones himself won on his initial try abroad. But perhaps the more remarkable side of Yates' victory was the grace and light-heartedness with which he clinched the title. The cabled report several wisecracks as he faced up to tense challenges in the match. More telling, he never once wiggle-waggled over a shot—just stepped up and cracked (or tapped) it. Apparently, he is a real golfer.

Mr. Harrison's Corrections.

If Senator Minton's bill carrying heavy fines and jail sentences for newspaper executives publishing as a fact anything known to be false were now the law of land, President Roosevelt's Arthurdale address certainly would have appeared in expurgated form. Fortunately a free press was at liberty to publish the President's statements in full without risk of prosecution. Now it has also furnished the public with Senator Harrison's corrections of that speech.

What an important person says and believes is news, whether or not his facts are accurate and his views sound. Correct reporting is the primary function of the newspaper. If errors appear, a free press provides critics with an opportunity for pointing them out to the public. That is precisely what Senator Harrison has done in his reply to the President's recent tax message. If the papers had been forced to suppress provocative misstatements contained in the President's address, Mr. Harrison's detailed and authoritative analysis of controversial provisions of the new revenue measure would not have been presented. And the public would today be less well informed about the nature and objectives of the tax program.

In many respects Mr. Harrison's reply is a document of outstanding interest. As chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, he was largely responsible for modification of the tax provisions favored by the President. Therefore his address was a reply to what was virtually a personal attack. By his own admission the Senator from Mississippi is the kind of Democrat who is brought up to believe that party disloyalty is "almost treasonable." That being the case, only fundamental and irreconcilable differences of opinion would have induced Mr. Harrison to take up the challenge thrown down by the President.

In masterly fashion he has marshaled a damaging array of facts to show that the undistributed profits tax is a recent innovation passed at the urging of the Administration without adequate safeguards to protect small corporations. Drastic modification of this tax does not, as charged by the President, amount to an abandonment of American principles of taxation. "It came to us in 1936," Mr. Harrison caustically remarked. "Mr. Oliphant, representing the Treasury, was very zealous and persistent about it. I presume he had sold it to the President. I was sold to some extent on the idea, as were others. It was a beautiful thing in theory."

In response to the President's assertion that the new tax bill "wholly eliminates the progressive tax principle with respect to capital profits," Mr. Harrison enters an unqualified denial couched in polite language. The President, he says, "has apparently been misinformed." With a wealth of illustrative detail, the Senator shows the substantial concessions made to persons in the lower income groups in respect to taxation of capital gains.

However, setting the facts straight and clearing away misconceptions will not bridge the intellectual gulf that separates President Roosevelt from Senator Harrison. They are poles apart because of their radically different conceptions of so-called "American principles of taxation." To Mr. Harrison, American principles apparently imply a tax system following a fairly familiar historical pattern—one that permits capital to accumulate and does not penalize the process of accumulation.

The Senator's attitude is significantly revealed by his admission that he is not opposed to closely held corporations. "In my section of the country," Mr. Harrison explained, "it is the closely held corporations that have built up communities." He also seems to harbor an old-fashioned belief that taxes are imposed primarily for the sake of revenue. That is indicated by his fear that the new law will yield less than had been estimated.

President Roosevelt, on the other hand, is disposed to identify the "American system" with tax laws designed to reduce inequalities of income, both individual and corporate. To that end he favors sharply graduated levies on incomes and penalty taxes that discourage reinvestment of earnings. Rightly or wrongly, his advocacy of drastic taxation of undistributed profits and capital gains assumes that these levies penalize bigness. And such penalization is plainly viewed as desirable. Between this Presidential view of taxation as a means of redistributing wealth and income and Mr. Harrison's matter-of-fact approach there is a world of difference.

Happy Outcome.

A welcome variety in marine accidents is reported from New York. In a splotchy fog at the mouth of the swirling Narrows, a Bermuda-bound cruise ship crashed into and sank a small excursion steamer. The latter's entire list of 278 passengers, as well as the crew of 47, were rescued with scarcely an injury. Indeed, only six men who jumped overboard in a panic at the first alarm were even wet by the experience.

For this happy outcome of what might have been a sorrowful tragedy, the officers and men of both ships involved are to be credited. According to all witnesses, they performed in admirably cool and efficient manner. The cruise ship captain kept his prow firmly pushing into the side of the disabled vessel until its occupants had crossed emergency gangplanks strung up between the two and had been counted to make certain that none was missing. As a precaution, seamen put life preservers on the passengers and even lowered lifeboats against every contingency.

Evidently there were enough life preservers to go around; the lifeboats seem to have been launched without hitch or mishap; the emergency, in sum, was met in perfect order, except for the six who jumped overboard. As for them, the old Briggs line applies perfectly: "When a Feller Needs a Friend."

Bigness May Be An Asset.

Summarizing the results of an inquiry undertaken for the Brookings Institution, Dr. E. G. Nourse offered a cogent defense of large-sized industrial units at the annual dinner of the organization last week. Dr. Nourse, director of economic research for the institution, concludes that large corporations are essential if we are to have constructive price policies acting as "the dynamic factor in modern industrial life."

Large resources, he says, are required to undertake the research needed to improve marketing and technological processes. "Finesse" is needed to explore the wants and gauge the purchasing power of consumers and then devise ways of satisfying those wants. In short, large capital expenditures are needed to provide the equipment and to support the preliminary losses of developing profitable markets for mass products which can be sold at prices within reach of the multitudes.

"Competition is just as keen and much more productive of results," Dr. Nourse and his co-worker believe, "when we find industrial giants marshaling their mighty resources to perfect new techniques and new schemes of organization through whose use more and better goods are put within the reach of the masses." No doubt the forthcoming study will present interesting evidence—only briefly referred to in this address—to support his contention.

Of course, the Brookings investigators do not assume that every large-scale enterprise is managed with a view to sharing with the public the economies of mass production in the form of lower prices. On the contrary, they realize that some large concerns adopt the policy of maintaining prices by controlling output. This exploitative phase of price-making is condemned as being in the interest of neither business nor the public.

The mere size of a business unit is not, of course, a test of its social worth. Some large concerns benefit the community; others become parasites, depending upon the policies followed and sometimes upon conditions beyond the control of industrial management.

A few years ago it would not have seemed necessary to stress these rather elementary observations. Today, however, there is a pronounced disposition even in high Administration circles to denounce mere bigness as socially and economically evil and to assume that large-sized business units are eager to grasp monopolistic privileges. For that reason it is most important to approach the study of pricing policies free from any preconceived ideas as to the nature of an ideal competitive system.

These Modern Spies.

Apparently when one standard of conduct is lowered, all are affected. Certainly that is the case in the field of espionage. The country is being currently treated to another spy scare. But it is not yet an impressive affair. The principals in the biggest story, which comes from New York, are a tawdry collection including a hairdresser, a steward and a pastry cook. This is a long cry from the good old days of international intrigue. Then, the mark of the spy was his monocle, his skill at baccarat and his capacity for Clicquot '06.

The hapless lady suspect in Louisiana comes closer to the old order. To trust the excited reports, she speaks French, German and English fluently and, in the best Mata Hari tradition, is a "pretty, young brunette." However, she must be on the dolish side. In this country on a visitor's passport, she went out and took a job, thus greatly facilitating her arrest.

They would never do with Oppenheim, these modern spies. They're a raffish, blundering lot. And until the master minds commission a better sort to do their snooping here it will be a generous conclusion that all the experts are busy in Europe. For the present we'll stick to Don Winslow for our spy thrills. Notice the jamb he's walked into in this morning's episode?

Laws And More Laws.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Moses was presented only Ten Commandments and Woodrow Wilson delivered Fourteen Points to the Versailles Peace Conference, but legislatures of 43 American States in regular session last year enacted 18,483 new laws. The record is a tribute to the ingenuity of the Senators and Representatives who from coast to coast have joyously assumed the burden of regulating other people's lives.

That only 1,245, or about 7 per cent, of these bills were vetoed would suggest that some of the State executives were not so alert as they might be.

First prize goes to Minnesota, where, out of 3,037 proposals for the salvation of organized society, only 495 were enacted. Ohio's record could be worse. Of the 1,085 measures cast before the lawgivers at Columbus, only 208 were approved.

Thomas Jefferson proclaimed that the government is best which governs least. He would be more than mildly surprised were he to observe this interesting and somewhat alarming development in the democracy he helped to found for the protection of the rights of man.

Labor Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Long before man's ingenuity framed the Wagner act, the law of labor relations was framed by the employing class in its own interests and with little regard to the interest of labor. Strongly intrenched behind the lay-off, lock-out and the deadly black list, this oligarchy ran things to suit themselves.

Labor, in retaliation, had or thought it had the unfair list and the boycott. But quite early in life they learned differently. In 1902 a boycott placed on a stove and range company in St. Louis and a hat company in Danbury, Conn., dragged through the courts until 1915. The hat company finally won an injunction and a Supreme Court decision to sustain it and the hat company collected more than $200,000 in damages from the hatters' union. But public resentment which followed when foreclosure on union members' homes began led to the Clayton act. However, there were so many loopholes in it that the high hopes raised by this act were not realized.

In 1932 the Norris-LaGuardia act which outlawed yellow-dog contracts and outlined conditions under which injunctions might be sought was passed. But there was so much confusion on the injunction issue in the State and local courts that again the intent of this act was not realized.

The Wagner act, passed as an equalization or balancing power between the employer and the employe, is now subject to attack on all fronts. Its opponents have heretofore been so powerful that it is safe to assume that after it is patched up and revised to suit these gentlemen that about all we will be able to say of it will be, as we said of the preceding labor legislation, "Thanks for the memories."

"Country Club" Churches.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When Mr. Babson assails the "country-club" spirit of "eight principal denominations" of Christendom, he lays himself open to criticism.

Take away the social, or "country-club" side of the church, and to that extent there is a removal from the spirit of the Author of Christianity.

On the threshold of creation there was a wedding; on the threshold of redemption, we find a wedding; on the threshold of eternity there will be celebrated the "marriage supper of the Lamb." No place for gloom, for sorrow, for despondency in the Divine economy.

When church services are dark, joyless, stereotyped, carried on continuously in the same form, the "country-club" spirit should be introduced. Carnivals, lotteries, tinsel, carnal amusements are carried on, but not by the eight "country-club" denominations. "Country-club" Christians should be commended, not censured. Let their shadow never grow less, so that there will be no return to medievalism.

Alternatives For Mr. Hopkins

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I commend you for the excellent editorial which appeared in The Post on May 27 dealing with the interferences of the WPA Administrator in the primaries of Iowa? I happen to be a citizen and voter in Iowa but, because of my position, I do not take sides in any political controversy.

However, this editorial pointed to something that is more than a local issue and that may profoundly influence the form of government which we shall have in America 50 years from now. If the man controlling the expenditures of huge sums of money is allowed to be politically partisan, then relief becomes a juggernaut. The identity of the particular party standard-bearer in Iowa is not of such great importance as the machination which would, by threatening to take bread from the mouths of the poor, control the primary campaign.

If you will consult the files of The Post you will find that a few days before this editorial appeared Mr. Hopkins is quoted as having dismissed a dozen WPA workers because of political activity. It is obvious, then, that there is one of two alternatives confronting Mr. Hopkins—he should either dismiss himself or retract his statement. Because I think he has done a splendid job in the administration of relief, I hope he takes the second alternative.

Employes' Rights.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We often hear the expression, "You cannot please all the people." We see a good example of this in The Post.

What I think to be one of the best editorials appeared in The Post of May 19 under the title, "Federal Employes' Rights." But I see one Allen Heald, of Arlington, Va., sends a letter condemning the editorial. I suppose Mr. Heald would be in favor of allowing the Government clerk to organize a German Bund in each department and commence the day's work (if they happen to be the ones that work) with "Heil, Hitler."

W. H. JONES.

West Coast Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are 100,000 square miles of virgin country in the United States. Where? About 400 miles north of San Francisco, near the California-Oregon boundary. This vast territory is partly in Oregon, partly in California. It contains billions of feet of untouched timber, minerals of several kinds, rich fruit and farm lands.

The way to open it up would be to complete the harbor at Crescent City, Calif., which is a bare 17 miles from the Oregon border. The harbor is already there, including a section of breakwater that was built 13 years ago. It is a natural, safe place for a major harbor—no rivers emptying into it, with consequent sandbars to contend with.

It will have to be done by the United States Government. It is impossible for citizens and farmers to complete the job, due to the great financial burden. Private business cannot do it for like reasons. So it remains for the Federal Government to complete the job it started and which has long ago been recommended by Army and Navy engineers. It has likewise been recommended by high Government officials, but so far Congress has let the matter ride.

The major portion of this rich timberland and other natural resources is owned by the Government. Hence, the Government stands to profit most. Private industry will thrive. Several lumber mills will immediately open, as well as factories, scores of new business houses and hundreds of homes. There will be plenty of work for thousands of men, many of whom are now unemployed. Crescent City will grow by leaps and bounds and will soon become one of the West's great cities.

There is nothing selfish in my proposal. I don't live there, I don't own a square foot of land and I have no ax to grind. I vision this completed harbor as a great boon for the whole United States. It will be a strong stimulus to Pacific Coast shipping and American shipping in general.

"This Asininity."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May a throttled majority pour congratulations upon the understanding head of Chairman Keller of the House Library Committee for his caustic condemnation of the high-handed procedure in ignoring completely "the wishes of Congress and the people" in regard to the Jefferson Memorial!

That complete overriding of the wishes of "The Pee-pul" on whose mandate the New Deal has tirasomely palmed off its various inflictions upon the patience of this country is perhaps as notorious a case as may be found on the record of misgovernment by bureaucracy. (Accent last syllables.)

Down with it! The $3,000,000 earmarked to start—and, my friends, you may put it down as only the start—the memorial may be only hen feed to our inspired billions blowers.

But such stuff as this, and the $5,000,000 proposed to be appropriated to pour the enlisted Army personnel into monkey suits called dress uniforms, should be kicked out decisively as a token that sanity still exists in the legislative branch even if it has been forfeited elsewhere. In the aggregate it is the outlays for such unwanted "improvements" that makes a laughing stock of the word economy.

To Representative Keller, whatever power is necessary to safeguard at this time the interests of the people, throttle this asininity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The best answer I can give Mr. Barefoot is to advise him to lay aside for a moment the prattle of the advocates of the League of Nations and collective security, and study the history of the European nations and the history of the relations of the United States with Europe, and then decide whether the United States should attempt to meddle in the historical and political evolution of Europe.

The President On The Tax Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of May 28 entitled "Without Approval" speaks of the President's "almost obsessive interest in extracting maximum tax returns from individuals with large incomes."

We have another name for it when an enterprising private agent steps into a restaurant and demands a big share of the intake for protection against stink-bombs, etc., though the "principle" is much the same.

We may hope for a real new deal when we have an adequate number of voters to show our politicians what is public property to be taken for public uses and what is private property to be left in private possession.

WALTER N. CAMPBELL.
Washington, May 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Could anything be more comical than the President going to West Virginia and making a speech to 13 children on the complicated subject of the tax bill? It does seem that he could have found a more appropriate sounding board from which to deliver himself, and make the pathetic display of his ignorance of the subject as he did in his speech.

Without training or experience and never having had to meet a pay roll, he sets his opinion up against the combined wisdom of the leading financiers, businessmen, and 60 of the foremost economists of the Nation, who warned him against the unwisdom of the surplus profit and the capital gains taxes.

Every argument he advanced in his speech had been already answered in the report of the Senate committee which accompanied presentation of the bill.

We have had over five years of the New Deal and its proponents are responsible for the plight the country is in at present. They seem incapable of thinking in any but political terms, and such only as they think will perpetuate them in power. The indictment of the leading businessmen of the country is prompted by political considerations, and is nothing but political buncombe, as is also the restoration of relief in Oklahoma. It would all, indeed, be humorous if it didn't involve an element of tragedy for the economic interests of the Nation.

Czech Serenade.

"I READ about Czechoslovakia," said Mrs. Trainum. "Wake up, Henry."

"Grmb."

"Fine, I see you know how to speak it."

Mr. Trainum raised his head. "Speak what?"

"Czechoslovakian."

"Say, what is all this about Czechoslovakia?"

"I said I read about it."

"So did I. What did you read about it?"

"I read about how it was a trouble spot."

"What do you want me to do about it?"

"I want you to tell me why."

"Because Hitler won't let it alone."

"Why won't he let it alone?"

"Because there are a lot of Germans over there."

"There are a lot of Germans over here too."

"That's true."

"Don't be like that, Henry!"

"Well, he says the Germans in Czechoslovakia are mistreated."

"Are they?"

"Probably."

"Why don't they go home, then?" continued Mrs. Trainum.

"They are home," Mr. Trainum replied.

"You said they were in Czechoslovakia."

"They are, but they're Germans.

"I thought people who lived in Czechoslovakia were Czechoslovakians."

"The place where these people used to live used to be in Germany, but now it's in Czechoslovakia."

"No."

"They must have if they've got it now."

"They didn't, because there wasn't any Czechoslovakia."

"Well, who did?"

"France and some other countries took some land away from Germany and some more away from somebody else, and they put it all together and it gave them Czechoslovakia."

"Then that makes France the bad country and Germany the good country."

"There aren't any good countries," said Mr. Trainum. "I wanna go sleep."

"Whmpt."

"No, please wake up, dear, I'm serious. I know how to solve the whole question."

"Tell it to Mr. Chamberlain."

"I will, if you'll give me his address."

"Oh, no, honey, he's the British prime minister."

"I don't mind. I'm sure he'll do it when it's suggested to him."

"All right, what is it?"

"Ulp!"

"What's the matter with that?"

"Plenty."

"Well, what, for instance?".

"Well, for instance, how would you like to give all the Republicans to Cuba?"

"But the Republicans aren't mistreated."

"They have fewer rights than the Germans in Czechoslovakia."

"I still think everybody would be happier if they would do what I said."

"They wouldn't, anyway."

"Why not?"

"Because there are Czechoslovakians in the German part of Czechoslovakia."

"I'm sure they wouldn't mind being under Hitler."

"Why wouldn't they?"

"Because he wants to save people from being mistreated."

* * *

"Why don't you let me go to sleep?" begged Mr. Trainum.

"Well, doesn't he?" persisted Mrs. Trainum.

"Doesn't who what?"

"Doesn't Hitler want to keep people from being mistreated?"

"He only wants to keep Germans from being mistreated."

"But he couldn't want to keep Germans from being mistreated without feeling the same way about other people."

"Why not?"

"Because that wouldn't be right."

"No, it's not right," agreed Mr. Trainum.

"But, Henry——"

"But what?"

"I—I don't know."

"I understand, dear," said Mr. Trainum. "Let's go to sleep."

The Railroad Unions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The railroad unions threaten to strike. If they know when they are well off, they will take a reduction in pay and turn a deaf ear to the Democratic politicians who gave them the world during and since Wilson's Administration, in charge of their souls.

If the unions try to repeat the A. R. U. act of the days of Debs, labor will be beaten to a pulp by none other than themselves. They are quarreling over an empty bucket. The bucket is dry and the executives know it, but labor doesn't.

We have some big-shot politicians in Congress, but not a single one big enough to direct a railroad when the present staff steps down and out—and they will. We are following the paths of Russia—the collapse of railroad transportation resulted in bolshevism. The only ones to lose today in America will be the labor unions themselves. The stock and bondholders have already been wiped out. As for unions, if they win, they lose.

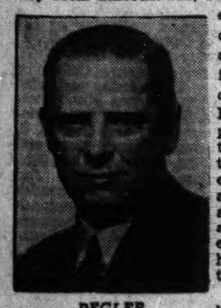
Amateur Male Cooks.

A PICTURE has been published showing a dozen highschool boys in white coats and muffin hats preparing a batch of spaghetti in a school kitchen. This may seem innocent fun, but as one who had experience with amateur male cooks your correspondent desires to sound a warning. The amateur male cook is a terrible thing. He destroys food, he ruins pots, pans and the digestion of his victims, he spatters mayonnaise, gravy and egg yolk all over the walls and ceiling and worst of all, he bears himself with an insufferable air of modest artistry which never has been called to time until this moment.



PEGLER.

Your correspondent has known several amateur male cooks, but none more pernicious than Mr. Ike Shuman, one of the editors of the New Yorker, whose weakness comes over him in regular cycles about twice a year, at which time he whips up a something which he calls bouillabaisse.

At such times, a few days in advance of the acute stage, Mr. Shuman's eyes take on a foggy, faraway look; he forgets appointments and wanders off in strange byways of the city, shopping for the ingredients of bouillabaisse. He goes to Greek, Italian, Persian and Egyptian grocery stores, lifting the lids of crocks and pickle barrels and sniffing their contents and thumping strange melons and pinching exotic tomatoes to see if they are prime.

* * * *

HE COMES HOME with his arms full of parcels and with little packets dangling from all his fingers by loops of string, and stores them away in the kitchen. He goes around mumbling jerked phrases about a pinch of saffron, a sprig of upas and a twist of bark from a slippery elm snipped in the dark of the moon. As the point of seizure grows nigher he begins to telephone friends that he is about to have bouillabaisse, and, having very loyal friends who rally to him in these crises out respect for the pronounced virtues which he possesses when normal, he generally gets a quorum.

The last day, of course, is the worst. That day he stays home from work, and Betty takes little Jimmy down to sit all day in the park or in the movies, explaining, "Daddy is having bouillabaisse; he will be all right tomorrow."

"But what is bouillabaisse?" Jimmy inquires, and Betty says, "You are too young to know, dear, and so am I."

At this time Mr. Shuman is in the kitchen up to his hip pockets in fish heads, dried octopi, egg shells, shark fins, turtle giblets, olive oil bottles and dried leaves of various kinds for seasoning, while on the stove their simmers and stews his chef d'ouevre in the making. Fumes rise and permeate their love-bower, neighbors pack a few things hurridly and leave the building, and the bubbles, rising higher and richer, splatter bouillabaise juice on the walls and ceiling.

At evening Betty returns with Jimmy just before the arrival of the guests, who usually include Mr. Jimmy Cagney, the moving picture actor, a friend so true that he has been known to come all the way from Hollywood just to see Mr. Shuman through his hour. Once the bouillabaisse has been served the tension begins to ease. Mr. Shuman pours a nice wine, and after a few slugs his guests begin to feel no pain and even make passes at the bouillabaisse, like actors eating tiny bits of apple in dinner scenes on the stage.

* * * *

THE AMATEUR male cook sits back awaiting compliments which are generously paid, to the injury of truth, and after all the guests have said twice around, "No, thank you, no more, but it was delicious," Mr. Shuman begins to recognize familiar scenes and friendly faces.

On the way home the guests stop at some tavern to eat, and to Mr. Shuman's proud inquiry, "How was that bouillabaisse, my dove?" Betty answers, in all truth, "Never better, my hero, and are you all right now?"

Mr. Shuman also scrambles eggs and bakes bread, but in fairness to him it should be stated that he never uses underhand tactics, as some amateur male cooks do. When Mr. Shuman is having bouillabaisse he frankly warns his guests of his condition, saying, "I am having bouillabaisse Thursday, and I want you to come." Other amateur male cooks are less straightforward.

Your correspondent once knew in Washington a very nice man all outward respects who said, "You must come up this evening. I am having a surprise."

Suspecting nothing, your correspondent went, and after the host had hidden his hat and coat the host said, with that strange look in his eyes, "I'll bet you don't know what the surprise is."

"No," said your correspondent. "Tell me."

"Baked beans," he said, with a note of leering triumph. "I cooked them myself."

The Once Over

Want A New Postoffice Today?

From Washington comes the announcement that the mass production idea is to be tried out in new postoffice buildings. Secretary Morgenthau offers cash prizes for the best designs for smaller type postoffices. The business of building new postoffices has grown so large that it is almost the Government's No. 1 industry.

* * * *

Postoffices used to last a lifetime. In fact it was common for two generations to remember the same building. But for the last few years the output of postoffices has run close to the output of automobiles.

* * * *

In fact the general feeling seems to be that a postoffice isn't much good after the first two years' usage and should be traded in for a new one with snappier lines.

* * * *

You can't visit many small towns these days without finding new postoffices so big they make the rest of the town look seedy. Some of these postoffices are so big the clerks get lost in 'em and are missing for days at a time.

* * * *

A visitor can't locate the clerk without powerful glasses, but he knows they are there because he can hear them rattling around.

* * * *

The old postoffice used to have just enough windows to handle the business, but some of these new small-town structures have eight or ten times as many windows as they have clerks. There are dozens of windows that the staff is yet to locate and identify.

* * * *

It takes twice as long to handle the mail because the clerks have to cover such vast distances on foot. And then, too, the buildings are so big that, while it may be clear and sunny up near the stamp window, the clerk may be snowbound in a spell of bad weather covering the other end of the postoffice.

* * * *

Those old-time postoffices that father used to know may not have been artistic or eye-filling but you could get a stamp in a hurry and you never got so confused by the architectural trends that you mailed a letter in a pumping station and drew up in front of a postoffice to have your gas and oil checked.

Jobs And Organization Explain Old Guard Democratic Victory In Primaries; Assessment Of Political Jobholders Upheld.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

AS EACH DAY'S conferences and appraisals have followed those of the day before, the true weight to be given to the May 17 primaries in Pennsylvania has been evolved. It is found by balancing patently self-interested comments from all three sides, against the actual results, and against the trend of events since the New Deal took hold because of its wide and handsome recognition of the desperate need of millions of the "under-privileged."

It is no very startling conclusion that a mixture of demagoguery and diligent organizing and distribution of favors by an entrenched political machine explain the success of the organization Democrats over the insurgent labor-Democrats in the primaries in their own party. Jobs, money, and organization were all on their side; and except in the face of an almost violent and frenzied popular movement, such a combination has always proved well-nigh unbeatable in American politics.

The results of the Republican primary are explained by the same combination, with the exception that jobs were, as yet, not available.

If this analysis is accurate, it is a fairly good indication of which party will win the contest for the governorship, senatorship, and other offices next November. For the jobs, nationally as well as within the State, remain with the Democratic organization.

Democrats Repealed Anti-Macing Statute.

NOT ONLY do the jobs remain with the Democratic organization that is now in power in Pennsylvania, but followers of the donkey were apprized on May 24 by the State Supreme Court that there is no law in Pennsylvania against macing, coercion, or collection of assessments from political job-holders for political purposes! There used to be a law, but in 1937 the Democrats indirectly repealed it, the court has decided.

Since this statement adds still further to the political power of the Democratic organization in Pennsylvania, it may be interesting to quote the exact words of the court. They were included in a decision refusing to permit the Dauphin County grand jury to make an investigation of the Earle administration, unless specific crimes were charged coming within the jurisdiction of the Dauphin County court. This halted an investigation inspired by former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, then a candidate for Governor in the primary, and who was removed from office by Gov. Earle on the heels of his making the charges the grand jury now is prevented from investigating.

Referring to charges of "macing, coercion and the unlawful collection of assessments from public employes," the court ruled that the charges were not set forth with sufficient clarity, and added, "Not a single allegation of fact concerning these charges is presented."

Continuing, the court calls attention to a point that has sensational import, but that the New Deal press has carefully refrained from head-lining.

"The petition as to these charges is fatally defective because under the law as it now exists no crime is charged," the ruling stated. "The charges were drawn with reference to the acts of June 13, 1883, P.L. 96, and July 15, 1897, P.L. 275. These acts definitely relate to elections and to campaign contributions, and are specifically and absolutely repealed by the act of June 3, 1937, P.L. 1333, Section 1901, at P.L. 1508 and 1513. These acts were highly important as a means of preventing forcible contributions from State employes for election purposes by political parties. Laws which regulate matters pertaining to, or incidental to, the conduct of elections, are election laws.

"See in re Moskowitz 26 D. and C. 567. The title of the act of 1937 is unquestionably broad enough to cover the repeal of these and any other acts 'relating to elections.' Their repeal was deliberate and intended, and there is nothing in the new Election Code which provides a substitute for them, nor are there any offenses thereby created which approximate the charges in this petition. Despite the fact that this may be regarded as most unfortunate for the State, it is the effect of the act of 1937."

Contributions May Be Legally Exacted.

IN BRIEF the court's decision would indicate that macing the mobs of job-holders in Pennsylvania for contributions to help the organization that gave them their jobs to stay in power, is no longer legally a crime. That it never has been held to be a crime politically, except by the "outs," is a statement that hardly provides enough facts for a respectable debate.

But while in the primaries the power of party organization proved as reliable this year as it has in many years in the past, thus settling for the time being the mad whim that led Senator Guffey to believe that the time might have come when labor organization could outbid it, the deciding power of aroused public sentiment was not eliminated. There was no such movement of sufficent force to defeat the regular machine within either party. But the roots from which such a movement might conceivably be built up, either in the State this fall, or in the Nation in 1940, still exist.

They are not exclusively labor-roots, although labor, as shown by the large vote cast for the C. I. O. candidate, Thomas Kennedy, is not to be entirely disregarded. They include, besides labor, what Gov. Earle is fond of calling "liberal" roots, those from which the New Deal has been burgeoned. It is these impulses, which include labor and a great many besides, upon which Gov. Earle has shown his dependence for popular appeal. And he continues, after no doubt noting the returns from the "Fortune" investigation, and those of the Gallup organization, to sum them all up under the name of Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

Conferences at Washington with leaders of the victorious organization Democrats, by representatives of the C. I. O., and the C. I. O.'s allies, Senator Guffey and Publisher Dave Stern, are a natural move on the part of seasoned politicians and labor leaders who have made a sour guess, but who have no intention of giving up their political privileges entirely.

The Democrats may not have given up entire control of their party to labor, but they have proved on more than one occasion that they are willing to make a great many more concessions to labor than the Republicans. And most wise observers agree that neither in Pennsylvania, nor in any other State, is the labor movement inclined to let go of a very fat bird in the hand, on the supposition that it will get hold of a covey of them in the Republican bush. Besides which fact, the national Administration and the control of Federal patronage, will remain in Democratic hands next fall, regardless of which party is in power in Pennsylvania. This seems enough proof of where labor's "balance of power" will be found to weigh.

Gov. Earle Resumes His Roosevelt Theme.

MEANWHILE Gov. Earle, emboldened by the success with which he won out after parting temporarily with his original political mentor, Senator Guffey, has started to thrum again on the harp that has accompanied his entire political career with its weird harmony. His first utterance after the primaries, addressed to the Federation of Democratic Women in Pittsburgh on May 24, took up the old theme, with the loud pedal pressed decisively down:

"The issue in this year's general election is President Roosevelt and the New Deal," Mr. Earle said, with the ease of long practice. "The men of vast wealth and the representatives of special privilege are ganging up on the New Deal."

So far there has been no evidence that any theme sufficiently dynamic and explosive to disrupt this melody, or to tear apart the tightly-spun web of special political privilege now in the unfaltering grasp of the State Democratic machine, has been hit upon by the the opposing Republicans.

764 Schoolhouses Being Built for CCC

A total of 764 schoolhouses for enrollees in Civilian Conservation Camps are being built by the War Department, James J. McEntee, acting director of the CCC, said yesterday. Total cost of the program is $375,000.

The program will bring the total of camps equipped with separate schoolhouses to 1,010, McEntee said, adding that the construction would be completed in a few weeks. In the Third Corps Area, embracing the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania, 85 schoolhouses are under construction, while 30 already have been built.

All but 22 of the buildings are being constructed of material salvaged from abandoned CCC camps, bringing the average cost of each to about $500. For a few camps, where construction work is near completion, portable school buildings, costing from $1,600 to $2,500, are being constructed.

Off the Record

By Ed Reed

"Goodness, Junior! Don't strain yourself!"

Gen. Cedillo

From the Kansas City Star.

The Mexican War Lord.

GEN. SATURNUNO CEDILLO, swarthy Mexican war lord and "boss" of San Luis Potosi, one of Mexico's most important northern states, has grown bolder since his brush last August with President Lazaro Cardenas. As despot of his state for more than 20 years, the 240-pound Cedillo always has favored small, privately-owned farms. Since 1935, when Cardenas induced him to accept the cabinet post of secretary of agriculture, Cedillo has fought against communial ejidos proposed by Cardenas.

Until last August the Indian-blooded general had been able to prevent Cardenas from redistributing the land in San Luis Potosi. Then the Mexican President pushed his plan of socialized agriculture into Cedillo's backyard and the disgruntled minister resigned his post to return to Las Palomas, his palatial estate. There he hinted darkly of violent resistance, but Cardenas moved swiftly to call his bluff.

In September, 1937, the President closed the San Luis Potosi aviation school and confiscated the planes. Two weeks later two regiments of federal troops moved into the state. Outside of an eight-hour gunfight in Valles, a little town on the new Pan-American highway, 300 miles north of the City of Mexico, there was no warfare between the troops and Cedillo's peasant army. Cardenas decreed that the general's militia, the last private army of any significance in Mexico, must be disarmed and there was no more trouble until last week when revolt again flared.

* * * *

LITTLE IS KNOWN of the early life of Gen. Cedillo. He once was one of Francisco (Pancho) Villa's guerrillas and later became one of the scores of Mexico's bandit chieftains who scourged the country with internecine strife. He became governor of San Luis Potosi during the presidency of Alvaro Obregon and terrorized the northern region by blocking the railroad between San Luis Potosi and Tampico for six years.

When Obregon asked Cedillo what he wanted, the despot answered: "I want land. I want ammunition so that I can protect my land. I want plows and I want schools for my children, and I want teachers, and I want books and pencils and blackboards and roads. And I want moving pictures for my people, too. And I don't want any church or any saloon. That's all."

Obregon acceded to his requests and the trains again ran between the two key cities. Cedillo later turned about-face in his attitude toward the church. He has become extremely tolerant of religion and that is another cause for the rift between him and Cardenas. The free schools of San Luis Potosi attract students from all parts of northern Mexico.

* * * *

THE STRANGE ALLIANCE between Cardenas, the leftist, and Cedillo, the rightist, goes back to 1935 when the war lord aided the President in ousting Plutarco Elias Calles, party boss. Calles had made Cardenas chief executive in 1934 as a reward for his ten years of faithful service to the National Revolutionary Party — Calles' well-oiled political machine. Cardenas was expected to be nothing more than a stooge for the "Iron Man of Sonora."

Instead he violated all the tenets of traditional Mexican politics by actually attempting to fulfill the campaign promises of his six-year plan. June, 1935, a year after he had been in office, Calles decided that his protege had overstepped the bounds, and he attacked his "marathon of radicalism." Specifically he directed a tirade against Cardenas' labor policy, blaming it for the series of strikes that then were paralyzing the City of Mexico.

Cardenas responded with an equal amount of vituperative abuse and then he widened the breach by demanding and receiving the resignations of all of his Calles-picked cabinet members, including the influential Tomas Garrido Cannabal, agricultural secretary and so-called "Scourge of Tabasco," and Rodolfo Calles, son of the former president-dictator. At the crest of the crisis, organized labor rallied to Cardenas and so did Gen. Cedillo with his large agrarian army. Calles was forced to flee to Los Angeles.

* * * *

AS A PLUM for his valuable services, Cedillo was given Cannabal's cabinet position by Cardenas in spite of the fact that their political sympathies are on opposite sides of the fence. In the two years he stayed in the cabinet, Cedillo several times handed in his resignation because of the government's increasing leftist tendencies. Each time, though, Cardenas soothed the heavy-jowled general and persuaded him to remain in the administration. But last August several factors led to the inevitable break.

A campaign against Cedillo as a Fascist threat to Mexico's well-being was inaugurated by Gen. Francisco Mujica, minister of communications and public works, and Vicente Lombardo Toledano, fiery secretary general of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, Mujica and Toledano encouraged the students at the Chapingo Agricultural School to demonstrate against Cedillo, who had given many of the students their appointments.

Angered at their falseness and riled by Cardenas' land redistribution program in San Luis Potosi, Cedillo telegraphed his chief: "Order war department to present for my disposition 200 soldiers to be sent to Chapingo Agricultural School to stop riots. Should you fail to comply please accept this as my resignation."

To his surprise Cardenas this time accepted the resignation and there was nothing left for the general but to return to Las Palomas. Following the August tilt with Cardenas, he remained quiescent until Cardenas requested him to leave his home state to accept a new military post. Cedillo viewed this as an attempt "to take me out of my state so as to violate its sovereignty and tie it to the all-embracing will of the central government." Immediately he ordered his peasant raiders into the hills to prepare for guerrilla warfare.

* * * *

CEDILLO knows he is fighting for his life. Apparently he believes the time ripe for revolt; a few days ago he told an Associated Press correspondent that the Mexican people no longer trust Cardenas. "They are tired of the infamous dictatorship, with communistic trimmings, that is putihg an end to all sources of wealth and submerging the country in ruin and misery."

According to Randall Pond, recognized authority on Mexican politics, Cedillo is not without ambition. Mr. Pond, long a resident in the City of Mexico, says that the general has his eye on the presidential election that takes place in 1940. The line-up for the campaign, asserts Mr. Pond, pits two conservatives—Cedillo and Gen. Ramon Yocupicio, governor of Sonora—against two radicals—Labor Leader Toledano and young Luis Rodriguez, governor of Guanajuato and former secretary to Cardenas.

Old Soochow

By Lin Yutang.

The Chinese Do Not Forget.

SOOCHOW is a rich, knowing widow. It is not like the chaste young girl that is Hangchow. There is so much mystery, for you cannot penetrate behind the walls of the great households. But it is old, and quiet, and strangely at peace with itself.

Soochow is now gone, like Peiping, Tientsin, Nanking, Shanghai, Hangchow and probably Canton. What has to be, let it be. The Japanese do not believe now, if they ever believed, that they can stamp out anti-Japanese feeling by killing more Chinese. They must be prepared to rule by force; for, everywhere a Japanese bomb drops, hatred of the invaders is sunk into the Chinese souls as shrapnel and splinters into their bodies.

The Chinese do not forget. At the Manchu conquest, the Manchus slaughtered the Chinese at Yangchow and Kiating, and the "Ten Days of Yangchow" and "Three Slaughters of Kiating" rankled in Chinese memory for nearly 300 years. They are not likely to forget the bombing of Soochow and looting of houses and outraging of women of Nanking for 100 years at least. No co-operation is possible. The Japanese must rule us by a permanent military occupation, or not at all. War, as usual, never solves any problems.

died down when the air-raid siren screamed a warning to the terrified populace, most of which was preparing to evacuate the central sections.

The Japanese planes scattered their attack, however, dumping bombs on outlying sections into which thousands of refugees were pouring. Eighteen bombs were dropped on Honam Island, a half mile west of Linghan University, in an effort to destroy an antiaircraft battery.

Aid Rushed to Doihara.

The guns were not hit, however, and they continued pumping shells at the attackers.

Crack German-trained divisions of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese army were hurled into the Lunghai battle area today as a rejuvenated Chinese attack, converging from three sides, sought to annihilate the army of Gen. Kenji Doihara trapped northwest of Lanfeng, it was reported from Shanghai.

Chiang arrived at Chengchow, 100 miles west of the present battle front, early today and assumed personal command of the operations, in which the jubilant Chinese predicted they would deal a smashing blow to the Japanese drive on Hankow.

Rush Reinforcements.

Gen. Doihara's harried Fourteenth Division was encircled by Chinese armies from the east, west and south and blocked off on the north by the Yellow River.

The Japanese military spokesman said Japanese reinforcements were being rushed westward from Kweiteh, about 40 miles east of Lanfeng on the Lunghai Railroad.

Japanese planes supported the movement of reinforcements, after reportedly cleaning out Chinese opposition around Kweiteh.

A Japanese column was driving westward from Kweiteh toward the Peiping-Hankow Railroad in an effort to cut the tracks south of Chengchow, where some of the best Chinese units reportedly have concentrated for the great battle that is expected near Chengchow, the junction of the Hankow and Lunghai railroads.

2,000 Face Death.

Chinese sources reported their columns at Lanfeng and in the areas north and west of that town were attempting to wipe out 2,000 Japanese huddled in the mud-walled town of Sanyi.

The Japanese retreated from Lanfeng when the Chinese smashed through their rear lines and made defense of the town untenable.

If the Chinese are successful northwest of Sanfeng, they will be able to consolidate their front along a line from Lanfeng to the Yellow River. Chinese said Doihara's troops were short of ammunition.

In Shanghai, trim little Japanese pursuit planes droned over Hongkew and outlying sections after word was received Chinese air squadrons planned to raid the Hongkew and Hungjao sections of the city, where Japanese airdromes are located.

Foreign consulates were warned to evacuate their nationals from these areas, presumably by high Hankow officials, but there was no indication the raid would be carried out.

The American Embassy at Hankow said the letter, notifying the consulates of the impending raid, would not be investigated, since it was presumed the Chinese government would notify the embassies directed if the letter were genuine.

tics" dominated WPA administration. Senator Gillette, seeking renomination, is a candidate against Wearin.

Gillette has gone along with the Administration on much major legislation, but he opposed the Court reorganization bill.

"A man's stand on the Court bill seems to be the only real test of whether the Administration will support or oppose him," Wheeler asserted.

The Senate's week-long political debate, centering on Hopkins' intervention in Iowa, has tended to drive many middle-of-the-road Democrats into either pro or anti-Administration camps, Wheeler said.

Warns Against Slush Fund.

Although declaring legislators were agreed adequate relief should be provided for the needy, the Montanan added:

"There is a strong feeling through the country that the moneys thus appropriated should not be used to pay off political debts, nor as a slush fund in either the primary or general election."

Other Senators agreed with Wheeler's statement that the Administration was making support of or opposition to the Court bill the acid test of whether candidates should receive Administration support.

In addition to Gillette, these anti-court Democrats are up for renomination to the Senate this year: Van Nuys, of Indiana, who is running as an idependent; Clark, of Missouri; Smith, of South Carolina; McCarran, of Nevada; George, of Georgia, and Tydings, of Maryland.

3 District Boys Receive Prizes at Mercersburg

W. Douglas Stuart, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Stuart, 3446 Oakwood terrace northwest; George E. Elliot, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Elliot, 3212 McComb street northwest, and Alvin G. Dulcan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Dulcan, 3838 Connecticut avenue northwest, were awarded prize distinctions at commencement exercises of Mercersburg Academy, Mercersburg, Pa., yesterday.

Stuart was awarded the book prize in senior French. Elliot was elected to the Cum Laude Society and Dulcan won the Tyson Memorial Prize for the junior making the greatest progress.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

While Memorial Day is being observed, there is reason for these lines:

Sixty-one blue spruce trees are living monuments on the Pike National Forest in Colorado. These were planted and named during the past 17 years for forest rangers, supervisors, guards and other officers of the Rocky Mountain region of the United States Forest Service who have died in line of duty.

The first five trees were planted on Memorial Day, 1921, in memory of Forest Service officers who had lost their lives in the World War, and 25 additional trees were planted in honor of other foresters who had died while in service. The trees planted in 1921 were blue spruce wildings from the forest in which these men had worked.

Since then, memorial services have been held each year at the same grove for forest officers who have died during the year. Six trees will be planted today (Memorial Day), four of them for Forest Service men who lost their lives in a fire on the Shoshone National Forest last summer: Senior Forest Ranger Alfred C. Clayton, CCC Foremen James T. Saban and Rex A. Hale, and Junior Forester Paul E. Tyrrell.

On August 21, 1937, Ranger Clayton was in charge of a crew of men fighting one sector of a forest fire on the Shoshone National Forest, Wyoming, when he and his party were trapped in a narow gulch on a branch of Blackwater Creek by a sudden burst of flames swept over them by a wind of hurricane fury. Clayton, Saban and Hale lost their lives in the gulch. Another crew working on the fire a short distance away, under the direction of Ranger Urban J. Post managed to reach a rocky ridge, where the men sought shelter among the rocks.

Seven of Post's crew died of burns and exposure, including Tyrrell, who gave his life in shielding a CCC boy from the flames. The forest burned nearly 2 square miles of forest land before being placed under control.

In addition to the memorial trees, the heroism of the four forest officers will be commemorated by giving their names to a campground, ranger station, trail and mountain summit in the Shoshone and Bighorn national forests. The U. S. Board of Geographic Names has approved the recommendation of the U. S. Forest Service to rename as Clayton Mountain one of the prominent topographic features in the blackwater drainage now designated as Double Mountain.

The Fire Fighters Memorial Trail, starting at the Cody-Yellowstone highway and leading through the burned-over area, will be marked by plaques, monuments and distinctive signs to identify points of interest among the blackened timber.

The winter quarters of the Tensleep Ranger District of the Bighorn National Forest have been named Saban Ranger Station in honor of James T. Saban, who was in charge of that ranger district at the time of the tragic Blackwater fire. The summer quarters near Tensleep Lake have been designated the Tyrrell Ranger Station in memory of Paul Tyrrell. The Blackwater Campground on the Shoshone National Forest has been renamed Rex Hale Campground in honor of the junior assistant technician who was in charge of a crew developing the campground when the fire call came.

In such ways as these the U. S. Forest Service is preserving the memory of four forest officers who didn't fail the service.

When Shakespeare counseled, "Neither a borrower nor a lender be," he wasn't speaking to automobile owners or automobile borrowers, but he could have been, to the vast profit of both classes, officials of the Bureau of Public Roads, Agriculture Department, observe. In a study of the case histories of more than 800 fatal highway accidents where passenger cars were involved, the bureau found more than 25 per cent of the drivers listed as "friend of the owner." Right here, we will venture that he wasn't a friend of the owner after the wreck had occurred. But, anyhow, the officials don't believe that anywhere near a quarter of the cars on the highways at any time are being driven by "friends of the owner." If this assumption is correct, "it means that borrowers have more than their proportional share of accidents," they say. The danger to the borrower is increased because of his unfamiliarity with the car, but the bureau's survey suggests that borrowers as a class are less responsible than car owners.

* * * *

We were at first alarmed, but later reassured the other day when, in a stroll through the South Agriculture Building, we saw a pretty young girl with a big opal ring on her finger standing above a laboratory trough handling those ferocious ticks that give you Rocky Mountain spotted fever. The girl handled them as though they were pet kittens, or pet rabbits, and was calling the ticks by pet names, such as Nellie and Rodney and the like. She seemed to think it quite safe, certainly a job required by science, a calling that leads one, indeed, to strange fellowships. Of the likes of this young lady, Commissioner Lucille Foster McMillin has the following to say in her book, "Women in the Federal Service:"

"Scientific work was one of the first professional-type occupations into which women were admitted in the Federal service, and it is still one that offers them many opportunities. Some of the work, just as in research laboratories and educational institutions under private auspices, is the routine blind-alley sort, and the girl who feeds mice by a clock, or makes routine chemical analyses, is not likely to find her work permanently interesting. Nevertheless, the women are in the laboratories and experiment stations, where, with ability and training, they may be able to gain promotion to some of the interesting and significant positions. While there may be only from one to five persons employed in some of the many specialized branches of science in the Federal service, yet, from senior agriculturist down the list to junior xylotomist and associate zoologist, there is scarcely one in which some woman is not working."

Why don't the girls who graduate from colleges this month read that book by Mrs. McMillin? She has things to tell women who intend going to work.

Bodyguard Slays Chinese Who Took Post for Japanese

Shanghai, May 29 (AP).—The Chinese bodyguard of a prominent Chinese lawyer killed his master and a fellow bodyguard today and then committed suicide in a crowded street in the heart of the International Settlement. Police said his motive was intense patriotism.

The slain lawyer was Yui Huchich. He was walking down a street with his two-man bodyguard when one suddenly shot and killed him and the other bodyguard, and then turned his weapon on himself.

Police were informed the assassin had vowed to "punish" his master for accepting a post with the Japanese-controlled Nanking reformed government.

Mrs. Carter Wins Horse Show Title

Miss Regina McKeever Takes Two Prizes at Rock Creek Club.

Bad weather or no, Washington society goes doggedly ahead with its outdoor activities.

Yesterday found a general exodus, either to the Army Relief Horse Show at the Fort Myer gardens; to Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss' Virginia estate, Merrywood, for badminton or tennis, or to the residence of Mrs. John F. Wilkins on the Rockville pike, with its swimming pool, tennis court and lovely gardens. There Mrs. Wilkins' son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Newbold, entertained a party of friends at luncheon.

Children were all over the place at the Army Relief Show at Fort Myer yesterday. Classes began at 9:30 a. m. and continued throughout the day despite lowering skies, and informal cocktail and supper parties followed the show.

Refreshment Stands Do Big Business

The hot dog stands did a rushing business, and the ham sandwiches and other refreshments gotten together by a committee composed of the wives of Fort Myer officers went the way of the hot dogs.

Mrs. Leslie D. Carter was the outstanding performer of the day, winning three blues with her mare, Dream Girl, and the jumping championship. Her husband is Capt. Carter, of the Army post. Miss Jane Kromer, daughter of Gen. Leon Kromer, was also among the winners.

The Commandant of the Fort and Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright entertained a party of friends in their box, Mrs. Wainwright wearing a gray tweed suit and a spring bonnet.

Coming all the way from Quantico, Col. and Mrs. Lewis Whaley were among the spectators, as were Col. and Mrs. L. D. Worsham and Col. and Mrs. Gordon Young, of Fort Belvoir. The Military Attache of the German Embassy and Frau von Boetticher were present, as were Col. and Mrs. Arthur Thayer, Col. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Col. and Mrs. W. W. Gordon, Miss Catherine Sexton, Miss Fannie Herr, daughter of the chief of cavalry, escorted by Capt. Sheehan; Col. and Mrs. B. T. Merchant, Gen. Leon Kromer, Mrs. Giles Merrill and many others from Army and civilian ranks.

Diplomats Attend Rock Creek Show

Meanwhile, out at the Rock Creek Riding Club, the Dominican Minister, Dr. Andres Pastoriza, served as judge in a riding contest for a cup donated by Ecuador's Ambassador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, a skilled horseman. The cup was won by Miss Regina McKeever. Later in the day Miss Helen MacNichols won the Todd Trophy.

Among those who witnessed the contests were Mrs. Claude Pepper, wife of Senator Pepper; Senora Eugenia Sosa, who is visiting her brother-in-law and sister, the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro; the First Secretary of the Ecuador Legation and Senora de Crespo, and the Second Secretary and Senora de Paez.

Mrs. Frank Crowley, Miss Chiyo Thomas and Mrs. John Stewart, the former Mary Senate Howes, were others who witnessed the riding exhibition.

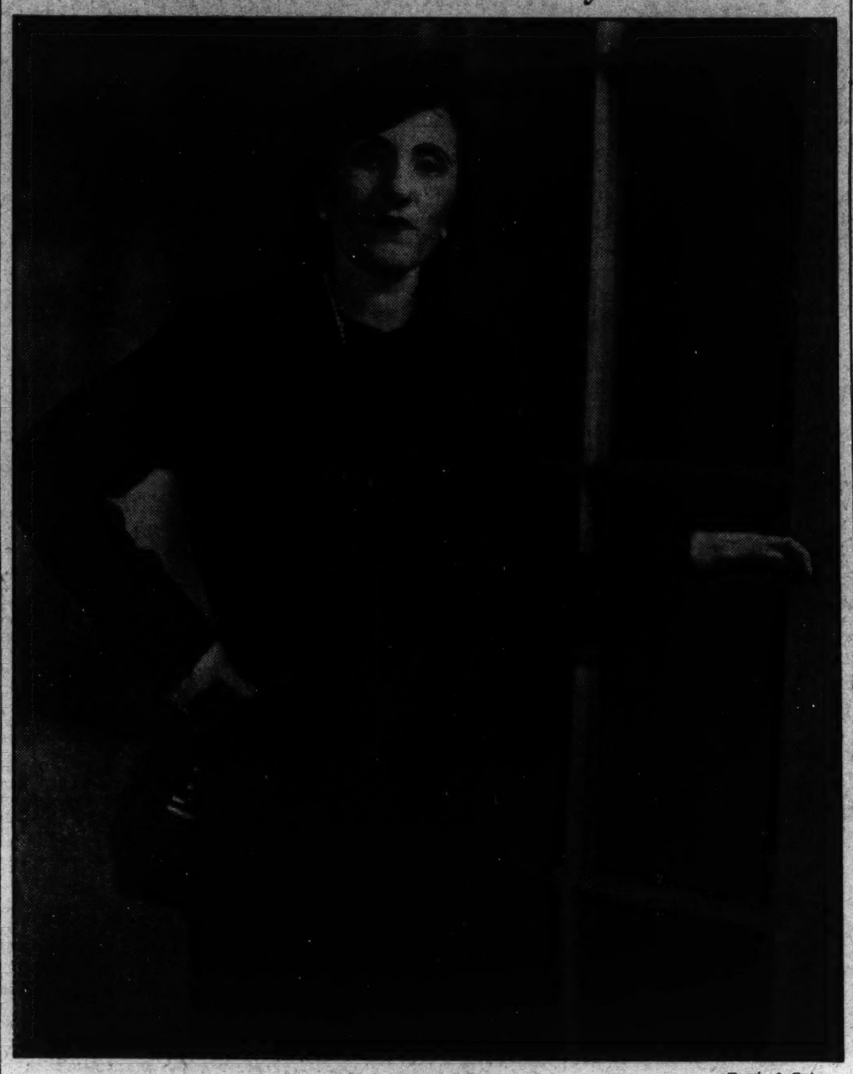
Miss Elvove Engaged To Milton Edelson

Mrs. Simma Elvove, of Kentucky and Washington, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Kady Elvove, to Milton Edelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Edelson, of Washington.

Miss Elvove is a graduate of the George Washington University Law School and a member of the bar of the District of Columbia. Mr. Edelson, a graduate of National University, is engaged in the practice of law here.

The wedding will take place June 26.

Visitor at Italian Embassy Here



Harris & Ewing.

SIGNORA MARGHERITA PIUSSI, sister of Donna Matilde de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador, has arrived in Washington for a brief visit at the embassy. She will sail June 10 for Italy with Donna Matilde and the latter's children, who will be joined later in the summer by the envoy.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

NOW that Mme. Prochnik, wife of the former Austrian Minister, is about to go into the negligee business, comes the rumor that her husband is planning to do some magazine and newspaper writing. After over 30 years in the Austrian diplomatic service, Mr. Prochnik should have a lot of interesting things to say.

DUDLEY HARMON.

It seems more or less taken for granted nowadays that Mr. Prochnik's post as Minister-Attache of the German Embassy will not last forever. In fact, some say that he was given this job after his country was "anschlussed" as a "beau geste" on the part of the German government to allow him time to look around and connect with something else. Whether he even will get a pension after his years of service seems rather doubtful.

In going into the clothes business, Mme. Prochnik is following the example of a number of prominent women who have made a success at selling. Attractive Mrs. Eldridge Jordan keeps regular hours at her house on Q street, where she sells gowns; Mrs. Newbold Noyes and Mrs. Emmons Smith work har, in their dress shop; Mrs. Moulton K. Johnson is ably assisted in her Connecticut avenue sports shop by her daughters, Caroline and Belle Johnson; Mrs. E. Cortlandt Parker's dress mart is well known, and there are many others who have successfully combined a career of this sort with a social and family life.

• • • •

THE Czechoslovak Minister, Vladimir Hurban, is having to eliminate the word vacation from his vocabulary. No sooner did he get down to Hot Springs, Va., for a rest than he had to turn around suddenly and come back again. He and Mme. Hurban were to have spent this week-end at Virginia Beach as the guests of Richard Crane, but at the last moment had to cancel their plans.

• • • •

THREE people who have added quite a bit to Washington's social life recently are departing today for points North and West. They are Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Lacy, of Denver, and the latter's sister, Miss Dorothy Willard, of New York, who have been visiting Mr. Lacy's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, of Massachusetts avenue.

Miss Willard is an unusually interesting person. At one time married to Cyrus McCormick, she took up a theatrical career after her divorce. She has appeared in a number of stock companies, but gained most fame when she helped produce last winter in New York "Casey Jones," the play which brought a railway engine on the stage. She also backed "Many Mansions," the religious play which Mrs. Roosevelt approved.

Mr. Lacy is a former member of the Colorado Legislature and was at one time Lieutenant Governor of that State. He and Mrs. Lacy have been looking over houses in the Virginia hunting country with a view of spending part of each year in the Washington neighborhood. After a visit with her sister in New York, Mrs. Lacy will rejoin her husband in Denver.

• • • •

MRS. HIGGINS CHAPIN, who entertained at a small informal luncheon yesterday at which the French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, was the ranking guest, will be off shortly on a pleasure trip. She will sail June 7, a week from tomorrow, on the Ile de France with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Higgins, of Worcester, Mass. Mrs. Chapin will spend two and a half weeks in London and will return to New York early in July. From there she will go directly to her home at Small Point, Me., for the rest of the summer.

• • • •

BARON Mario Bucovich, the Italian photographer, has gone to New York and is staying at the Ambassador. He says he does not expect to return to Washington except possibly for brief stays. Aside from his pictures, he will be remembered as the town's best amateur cook.

Mrs. J. F. Tully Plans Luncheon

Mrs. James F. Tully entertained on Saturday at a luncheon and shower in honor of Miss Dorothy Skirm, whose marriage to S. Albert Mickler will take place on Tuesday, a week from tomorrow.

The guests included Mrs. George Louis Skirm, mother of the future bride; Miss Bernice Skirm, her sister, Mrs. William J. Rowan, jr., Mrs. Norman Martin, Mrs. Raymond Brown, Mrs. Julius C. Martin, Miss Agnes Rowan, Mrs. John Salan, Miss Margaret Brown, Mrs. Philip E. Schreier, Mrs. George Harrington and Mrs. William Brown.

Judge Bertram Mickler, who will serve as best man for his brother, has arrived here from St. Augustine, Fla., to attend various prenuptial parties. T. Roger Mickler, another brother, and former Mayor of St. Augustine, will arrive on Wednesday. Both attended Georgetown University and the Georgetown University Law School here.

Club Will Hold Fashion Show

Mrs. Oliver Busby is chairman of the annual card party and fashion show to be held Wednesday at the National Woman's Democratic Club of Montomery.

Miss Tempe Curry, voted the prettiest girl at the University of Maryland, will take the part of the bride in the fashion show. Her attendants will be the Misses Meta Stuart Todd and Ellen Latimer.

Others who will model are Mrs. Philip Fischer, Mrs. Bevan Sharpless, Mrs. Walter Perry, Mrs. G. D. Nolan, Mrs. Thomas Williams, Miss Lois Boswell, Miss Sally Todd, Miss Katharine Benson, Miss Mary Anne Klinge, Miss Ella Virginia Waters, Miss Mary Plummer and Miss Sally LaScala.

Mrs. Arthur Reynolds is vice chairman of the event, and others on the committee are Mrs. Philip Fischer, Mrs. Charles Latimer, Mrs. Eugene Case, Mrs. Ernest Offut, Mrs. Charles Arles, Mrs. F. Eliot Middleton, Mrs. Ralph Wells, Mrs. John Diamond and Mrs. John Livingstone, jr.

Alumnae Banquet Set for Thursday

Convent Group to Meet at Sulgrave Club.

Invitations have been issued for the Georgetown Visitation Convent Alumnae banquet to be held at the Sulgrave Club on Thursday evening. Mrs. Joseph Leiter, president of the Alumnae Association, will preside and alumnae members are expected from practically every State. The annual meeting will be held on Friday, June 3, and the Sisters of the Visitation have invited the alumnae to luncheon at the convent, following their meeting.

Miss Madeline Shriver, of Union Mills, Md., entertained at luncheon the past week in honor of the Maryland chapter of the Alumnae Association. She was assisted by several members of the Baltimore alumnae, including Miss Emma Clarke Burch, Miss Eleanor Dorsey and Mrs. Robert H. Goldsmith. Among those attending from Washington were Mrs. Joseph F. Byrne, Miss Eleanor Connolly, Miss Agnes Fealy, Miss Edith Heiskel, Miss Christabel Hill, Mrs. John C. Keane, Mrs. Edgar Murdock, Mrs. Godwin Ordway and the Misses Margaret, Rose and Helen Shea.

Sigma Kappa Units Plan Joint Meeting

Washington Alumnae Chapter of Sigma Kappa will hold its annual joint meeting with Zeta Chapter of Sigma Kappa, of George Washington University, at Congressional Country Club Monday, June 6. Prior to the meeting there will be a buffet supper at 7 o'clock.

During the meeting the officers for 1938-1939 will be installed. The alumnae officers are Mrs. J. Earle Bassett, president; Mrs. George C. Rodgers, vice president; Miss Virginia Mitchell Smithson, treasurer; Mrs. Donald Saunders, secretary; Mrs. Bernard Burdick, registrar; Miss Leila Hardell, Panhellenic delegate, and Mrs. Augustus S. Goodyear, Triangle correspondent.

The chairman of the joint meeting is Mrs. Barton W. Richwine, to be assisted by Dr. Ella M. Enlows, Miss Violet Austin, Mrs. J. Onsby Smith and Mrs. Donald Saunders.

Sigma Kappas in Washington and vicinity who plan to attend have been asked to notify Miss Violet Austin.

Dr. and Mrs. Zook Have Garden Party

Council on Education Staff Are Guests.

Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council on Education, and Mrs. Zook entertained on Saturday afternoon in honor of the staff of the American Council on Education at their home in Wesley Heights. The guests were received in the garden.

Among those assisting were Miss Dorothy Leemon, Miss Catherine Lantz, Miss Dorothy Saunders, Mrs. W. H. Ontrich, Mrs. C. R. Mann, Mrs. Kenneth Eels, Mrs. C. S. Marsh, Mrs. Kenneth Holland, Mrs. R. E. Iffert, Mrs. O. K. Lovejoy, Mrs. Walter Eels, Mrs. Homer Rainey, Mrs. Donald Shank and Mrs. Charles Hoban, jr.

To Give Picnic.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn and Arthur Krock will entertain at a picnic supper on Saturday evening in the garden of the Dunn residence on Observatory Circle. In case of rain, the party will be held on Sunday evening.

Visit Walkers.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., are spending the holiday week-end with Mrs. Robert's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walker, at Webley, their home on the Eastern Shore.

Washington Girl Is Betrothed to James Leahigh

Miss O'Donoghue Will Be Wed to Georgetown U. Professor in July.

Mrs. John A. O'Donoghue, of Washington, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Helen O'Donoghue, to Prof. James F. Leahigh, son of Mrs. Frank Leahigh, of Washington, Ind., and the late Mr. Leahigh.

The future bride is a graduate of Georgetown Visitation Convent and Catholic University. Her fiance was graduated from St. Mary's College in Kansas and received his master's and doctor's degrees at Georgetown University. He is professor of political science at the university.

The wedding will take place in July.

• • • •

Maj. and Mrs. Jesse Miller, accompanied by their house guest, Miss Jane Bensinger, of Louisville, motored to Tappahannock, Va., to spend the week-end at the summer home of Leon Strause, jr. Dr. and Mrs. Milton Harris and Mr. and Mrs. David Simon also are guests of Mr. Strause.

Richard Crane Is Holiday Host

Richard Crane, whose James River estate, Westover, is one of the most beautiful in the country, is entertaining a large party of friends, including several Washingtonians, over the week-end at his villa in Bird Necks Point, Virginia Beach. His daughter, Mrs. Frederick S. Fisher, jr., the former Miss Bruce Crane, is serving as his hostess.

Mr. Crane's guests include Mr. and Mrs. John B. Plum, the latter the Danish mezzo-soprano. Also with him are Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Miles, of this city. Mr. Miles is a former chairman of the Social Security Board and is now in the office of the Attorney General.

Mrs. Crane, who had expected to go to Virginia Beach for the holiday, remained at her home to attend the Deep Run Hunt Club Horse Show in Richmond, where a string of Arab horses from the Crane stables is being shown by invitation of the club. Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, of Washington, and her house guest, Princess Mary duSayn Wittgenstein, attended the Deep Run horse show with Mrs. Crane.

D. A. R. to Have Party June 4

The Army and Navy Country Club will be the scene of the annual luncheon of the Col. James McCall Chapter, D. A. R., on Saturday afternoon, June 11.

This will be the first meeting under the leadership of the chapter's new regent, Miss Catherine Hill, and will mark the close of the current year for the chapter.

Those in charge of arrangements are Miss Catherine Hill, regent; Mrs. Wayne Birdsell, vice regent; Miss Ophelia Kerley, chaplain Mrs. Florence T. Goodson, recording secretary; Mrs. John H. Nicholson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Joseph S. Lemmo, treasurer; Mrs. Robert K. Bole, registrar and Mrs. Wilfred J. Clearman, historian.

100 Sign to Aid Hadassah Fete

Nearly 100 hostesses have signed up to head tables seating 10 to 12 each at the annual spring luncheon of the Washington chapter of Hadassah June 8 at the Mayflower Hotel.

Mrs. Edward C. Ostrow is chairman and her cochairman is Mrs. Herbert Glassman. The program of the luncheon is in charge of Mrs. I. E. Levinson, Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger and Mrs. Zal Diamond. Mrs. David Kushner, known in dramatics as Yvonne Kushner, will give a monologue and Mrs. David B. Greenberg, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., chairman of the youth Aliyah committee of Hadassah, will speak. This year's luncheon is for the special benefit of that project which undertakes the transfer of Jewish youth from Germany, Poland, and Austria to Palestine.

Miss Henrietta Szold, 77-year-old founder of Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, has begun to negotiate for the transfer of Jewish children from Austria to Palestine. Miss Szold, director of the movement, will try to secure the removal of Austrian children as speedily as possible to make use of the 1,400 youth and student immigration certificates which, by special arrangement, the British government has just issued and which expire September 30.

In the last four years the youth Aliyah organization, of which Hadassah is the sole agency, has settled 2,130 Jewish children from Germany and Poland in 35 cooperative agricultural colonies and three trade centers of Palestine.

Since the Nuremberg laws will be applied in Austria, virtually depriving Jewish children of an education, vocational and professional training, Hadassah members feel their only hope of a normal development toward useful adulthood lies in Palestine, where co-operative settlements are eager to receive the European youth.

How to Acquire Poise? Asks Girl Who Blushes Helplessly Whenever She Greets a Man

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My question is—how to acquire poise? I am 24 years old, have a good education and for the last two years have held an excellent position, but in spite of it all, I still blush like a schoolgirl if I happen to meet a man friend or acquaintance unexpectedly. I have been teased about it at the office and this makes the whole thing more humiliating than ever. It doesn't sound like such a terribly important thing but it means much to me.

• • • •

I've watched other girls and envy some of them so much because of their ability to say and do the right thing at the proper moment. I am not a stiff person and after I know people well, things go along smoothly. It's just that uncomfortable embarrassment and blushing at first that is getting me down. Can you suggest a solution? Sincerely, JANE.

• • • •

DEAR JANE: So far as the average woman is concerned, the shortest cut to poise will be found in her positive conviction that she is immaculately and fragrantly clean, flawlessly groomed and becomingly dressed. Thus armed for social encounters, she need not fear to meet the devil himself, not even in the form of her worst feminine enemy flirting with her favorite beau. And thus turned out, she can (if she's less than 30) well afford to consider a tendency toward tremulous blushing as a downright asset.

• • • •

I believe, if the whole truth could be ferreted out of them, that 99 men out of 100 today are rather dismayed at the disappearance from the social scene of the exquisite phenomena of maidenly blushing. I think they're rather doggedly inured to, but not necessarily sold on, the delicate cosmetic finish to beautiful ladies' faces that neither fades nor deepens under any kind or amount of stress. I think, when they tease a girl about her blushing, they mostly do so in the delighted expectation of seeing her blush the more rosily.

• • • •

Her cue is to laugh with them, in happy if slightly apologetic confusion, and proceed to discuss the nuisance value—to the blusher—of blushing. To try to change the subject abruptly, or to ignore the sally, is to seem hypersensitive, unable to "take a joke" on one's self. If it is girls who are critical, their motives are probably purely malicious, but the same tactics will likewise prevail with them. If they find they can't get your goat (as we say), they will speedily drop the subject.

Napoleon's Mistake.

NIGHT LETTER (BY WESTERN UNION) TO MARY HAWORTH: "Question: Was Napoleon an efficient lover and husband? You have doubtless read his letters to Marie Louise. How do you account for her falling for a fellow like Gen. Neippert? Napoleon is credited with great ability as a soldier and great efficiency as civil administrator. If he was a failure as a lover and a husband, how do you account for it?" "UNSIGNED."

• • • •

DEAR UNSIGNED: I imagine Napoleon's failure as lover and husband was due to the fact that he stayed away from home too much.

How to Cure 'Blue Spells?'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 18 and a college sophomore. I have great difficulty in throwing off frequent and prolonged "blue spells," and keeping busy—which I try to do when one "hits" me—doesn't seem to help much. Can you suggest something? Some people can be happy despite many cares. Why can't I?

• • • •

Another problem: My fiance complains that I am too passive about showing affection. I have the same difficulty as to my parents (who are divorced). Often I want to kiss them warmly, but feel so "tight" and repressed about it inside that I feel like weeping, and all I can do is give a "peck," instead of a kiss. My fiance and I love each other deeply, and freely admit it, so it seems strange I should be so "pent up" with him.

• • • •

However, I only see him every two or three months and when he comes, I have to go through a period of getting used to him. When he is absent I am conscious of trying to repress my emotions, and when he is present I can't "let go." We have been going together for four years, off and on, and have been engaged for a year and a half, and my attitude troubles me more and more as time goes on. Please advise me. TROUBLED.

• • • •

The Natural Remedy.

DEAR TROUBLED: It is very likely that emotional inhibitions are responsible for your "blue spells." Correct the one and the other will disappear. If you were happily married, for love, to an intelligent, sympathetic, understanding man, I daresay you would eventually revert to consistently cheerful, warm-hearted normalcy. Your trouble, I daresay, grows out of a lonely, insecure, love-starved childhood, during which you learned to keep a poker face while throttling your emotions at their very source, so that they are paralyzed (or "frigid") for lack of exercise.

• • • •

You need, actually, to be wooed out of this unnatural reserve, and you will owe a great debt of gratitude to whoever tenderly and affectionately undertakes the task. In my opinion, it is doubtful that it can be achieved outside of marriage, for, as I see it, it is a problem involving the full awakening of all your emotions, which can only be safely and properly undertaken in marriage.

• • • •

It is rather unlikely that you will ever altogether outgrow your stiff restraint toward your parents, for the reason that their embarrassment would probably be greater than your own—no matter how responsive and touched they might feel in their hearts—if you were to attempt today to reveal, in words or gestures, the strength and depth of your love for them. Your dammed-up emotions must first find their outlet in mate love (and possibly mother love) before they can extend, with serene sincerity and fullness, to include your parents.

• • • •

I think a better understanding of the nature of your present, entirely remediable handicap, such as could be achieved through a carefully plotted course of reading, would do much toward correcting your moody emotional tension. M. H.

Navy Blue Needed By Shopgirl, Just As by Zog's Queen

Paris (U.P.).—The April wedding of King Zog of Albania and American-born Countess Geraldine Apponyi was a reminder that navy-blue suits are indispensable—to queens as well as shop girls.

The new Albanian queen stopped in Paris to buy two navy ensembles, also a magnificent white satin wedding gown which Chanel made for her. One of her blue outfits has a straight skirt and a fitted jacket with revers made of a large white Indian silk frill falling softly on each side. The blouse is of the same white Indian silk (tussor) piped in navy blue. A new suede clip, introduced by Molyneux, fastens the jacket. It is a simple thing, made of two long rectangles of suede which clip together horizontally.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 29.

ALICE HUGHES.

The newcomers raise the nursery population of this pleasant young couple to five, which is considered very good going here during the throbbing thirties. Young Nelson, who is high in the councils of his pappy's Rockefeller Center, is said to have passed out two cigars to each congratulator in honor of the double. And I learn that the business of achieving offspring is no minor matter (as though it ever were) in the Park avenue canyon.

The minimum cost of a high-priced baby doctor and hospitalization figures at around $1,500, and often runs higher. Layettes and baby clothes as the infant grows reach nearly $1,000. By the time the child can toddle, the darling represents an outlay of at least $5,000. But why be sordid? They are priceless in the hearts of their doting parents, just as they are far down in the depths of the lower East Side. Leading headliners of the day, now at the "cunnin'" stage, are 2-year-old Bill Astor, the little boy of Eddie Duchin and the late Marjorie Oelrichs, a flock of young Rockefellers and the twin daughters of the W. H. Vanderbilts. All guarded like the crown jewels.

They even have their own smart clothes shop, called "Tobey's" and run by Mrs. Russell Post and Mrs. Fraser Horn. Even their little sweaters have crossed polo mallets on the chest! They are watched, petted and loved just like any other babies. And I suppose they have just as much fun as the $25 darlings of my childhood. Or do they? I've never been a Park avenue tike, myself.

• • • •

The pop-priced opera at the Center Theater in Radio City made nice money for all, but the management in dinner coats were no end distressed because the audiences brought lunches, in true European style, and scattered the debris all over the lovely house! . . . Just isn't done . . . .

• • • •

That horrid thunder you heard in the east yesterday was an all-day "jam sign" here in which nearly 50 of the most famous loud bands took part. No—I spent a quiet, restful day in Toronto. Swing poisons me, now.

• • • •

Miss Sally Rand, bubble bouncer and dramatic star, lost a packet, I hear, in helping back Estelle Winwood's production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," which staggered a few days ago and died on Broadway Poor Miss Winwood is said to have hocked her gems, and the money went the same way. Art is not only long, but tough . . .!

• • • •

In among the snooty weddings of the season it was nice to note the nuptials of Marion Turpie, famed woman golfer, to Harry McNaughton, the frantic "Bottle" of Phil Baker's radio show. It was a real radio wedding, with Announcer Von Zell as best man and Phil and the heckling "Beetle" in the pews . . .

• • • •

The stores are overflowing with cool cotton frocks these days, and remarkably inexpensive, too. This year they have more style than ever before. And I suppose I needn't add that many of the prints stem from this World's Fair we're supposed to have. Maybe you've heard of it. One has Trylons and Perispheres, the fair theme. Another has the fair's seal in white, against navy. Of course, this is probably strictly local and for sweet publicity's sake. But you might like a Tryon and Perisphere, too—just for a guessing contest!

Survey by Dr. Iva L. Peters Shows Chic Essential to Economic Success; Advises Fashion Study and Careful Planning of Wardrobe.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

"IF YOU WANT to succeed as a career woman, it means merging appearance and brains. Dress is just as positive a stimulus today in the work environment as in the social environment of other days, and the shrewd business woman will do well to weigh its importance in the current scheme of things."

It was Dr. Iva Lowther Peters, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs of New York (who was in Washington for several days) speaking, as we lunched, and she told about her interesting interview study of 212 business and professional women throughout the United States.

"As far back as 1910, about the only occupation open to women was teaching and they dressed the part," said Dr. Peters. "With the entrance of women into the fields of business and professions, the working psychology as well as the appearance status took on a radical change. Now the cut and material of the costume, the right accessories and a smartly becoming coiffure have about the same rating as a college degree. Since women have become so style-conscious, the men have been affected by this trend too, from discussions by their families, the movies and the like, and consciously or unconsciously set a high appearance standard for women in their employ.

Design for Growing.

"Is there a fixed pattern for ambitious career women to follow in regard to grooming?" we asked.

"The woman who knows how to fit into the picture has both brains and diplomacy," Dr. Peters remarked with emphasis. For instance, she pointed out, if you are seeking a job on a hot July day, aim to look cool as well as smart, and the same applies to dressing to appear comfortable on a cold winter day. Another idea in this category, this authority told us, is choosing the costume in harmony with the section of the country in which you live; environment plus adaptation of the ensemble.

Getting down to dollars and cents, we inquired into Dr. Peters' ideas on budgeting the clothes wardrobe for the business girl of the rank and file salary—one who is not as yet an executive and who gets perhaps $25 a week. "My advice to the business girl whose salary makes it imperative that she plan her wardrobe with discretion," said Dr. Peters "is to buy fewer clothes of good fabrics, well made, instead of an extensive wardrobe made up of cheap things which will not wear or dry clean satisfactorily."

Much can be learned about smart clothes and proper correlation of accessories from window shopping, Dr. Peters commented; that is, if you are in a city which offers such inspiration.

A Close Shave on $5.

"How about the recent statement made by a noted fashion authority that a business girl could plan an adequate wardrobe on only $5 a week," we queried? Dr. Peters' answer to this was that it was possible but would take a lot of close figuring. So many complications enter into a fixed clothes budget, she stated, that a definite amount of money for this purpose is not easily estimated. For instance, if this is the winter you have to buy a new coat, it cuts deeply into the budget. Climate also influences the amount and kind of clothes needed throughout the year; also the extent of your social activities.

Women of today don't show a lack of brain power by making appearance a paramount issue, according to this authority; they have too much good common sense and know how adequately to take care of a job and a wardrobe too. "You owe it to yourself to look as well as you can regardless of your social or business status," Dr. Peters said. But the wise woman will plan her clothes so that they will not detract from her personality; chic but not obtrusive."

In regard to current style trends, she has little criticism and thinks they are on the whole smart and practical. The day of the interview Dr. Peters was attractively attired in a heather wool cape-suit, with printed blouse and hat, shoes, gloves and handbag of dark brown.

YOUR FIGURE, SIR!

By Ida Jean Kain.

TO HEAR THEM tell it, men are never "heavy" eaters and women are always "light" eaters, which makes it difficult to account for all the overweights.

There may be some truth in the contention that you do not overeat, but here is the catch—you eat the wrong foods. Almost invariably, weight trends parallel food habits, and if you are unable to explain an increase in your weight, look over the two lists below and place a check mark at the side of the dish you would naturally order. Be sure that you check the foods you really like, and not the ones you think I want you to like. Your choice between the two foods given on each line will tell the truth about your food habits.

WHICH DO YOU ORDER? This	or	That.
Cream soup		Bouillon.
Pork chops		Lamb chops.
Candied sweet potatoes		Baked potato.
Peas		Spinach.
Head lettuce, Roquefort cheese dressing	with	Mixed vegetable salad.
Hot biscuits		Whole wheat bread.
Jelly		Relishes.
Two pats of butter.		One pat of butter.
Apple pie		Fresh fruit.

The Calories Differ.

Well, what is your score? If you have marked as many foods in the bouillon list as in the cream soup list, you are moderate in your food habits and your weight is probably normal. But if 75 per cent of the scoring is on the cream soup side, then fattening dishes are a habit with you, and, to put it mildly, you are not a "light" eater. Or perhaps you liked everything on the first list. Then the probabilities are that your weight is around 20 per cent above normal—or, if not, it soon will be!

Although the two lists contain exactly the same number of courses, the cream soup menu contains, conservatively, 1,800 calories, the bouillon menu about 750 calories.

Food habits are the predominant cause of overweight. When you observe the eating tendencies of the people who regard themselves as "naturally" stout, you find that, in general, they like to eat and that they prefer the rich foods. The normal weights merely follow an inclination to choose foods from the lower calorie brackets.

There are two exceptions to this rule. The person who eats tremendously but remains lean and wiry, and the person who is careful about his or her food intake and still gains because of a short and stocky build, with its low fuel requirements, do not bear out the general statement that food habits are the cause of overweight. You are not likely, however, to be either of these exceptions.

Diets Are Suggested.

Going on a diet to change your weight is of little use unless you change the food habits which control your weight.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Wanted—A Husband.

I.

Nellie McSap is really not a very bright girl,
She loses all her jobs because she can't keep up with the rest.
Who work in her office.
Since she can't make a living where brains are required,
What is to become of her, ask housewives of Midtown,
Unless she gets married and has a home of her own,
And children to care for?

II.

Lena Riffle has never been what you would call strong,
She catches everything and she misses days upon days
From her school-teaching.
It's simply too bad she should work in the buffeting world,
Say the women of Midtown, and they steadfastly agree
That the only solution of all her frailties and ailings,
Is a home and a husband.

III.

Estella Posey is a very difficult girl to handle,
She's extremely odd and she goes off at all sorts of tangents
When moods come upon her.
She's so extremely tempermental that her future's a problem,
To matrons of Midtown, who are righteously hoping,
That some upstanding man with a kind but firm hand,
Will come along and marry her.

IV.

Esther Belle Gadd is near to becoming a town problem.
The way she shocks older people and stay out at nights,
Is the main topic of gossip.
She'll bring disgrace on her family if something isn't done,
Say the dowagers of Midtown, or she doesn't get settled
With household responsibilities, so they're combing the town
For a good man to marry her.

V.

Mamie Chitterling, who means well, but is not quite all there,
Is always to be found making a nuisance of herself
In public places.
There are some who think she should be put in an institution.
Yet Midtown women maintain she might make a nice little wife,
For she's very domestic, and all might run smoothly
If she were once safely married.

'Five-in-One' Dress For the Week-End Gives Versatility

To solve the dress problem of the busy American woman, students of the Cooper Union Art School, New York, have designed an unusual "five-in-one" ensemble.

The "five-in-one" is a four-piece creation of convertible and reversible heavy linen designed by Miss Emmabelle Cook, of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., "for the young lady invited for a week-end." It consists of a backless blouse, a sports skirt, short bolero jacket and flower-print cape.

The cape may be used in walking to and from the beach. Removal of the cape creates a sports costume of short, wide flair skirt and backless blouse. Addition of a bolero jacket makes the costume suitable for shopping in town. For afternoon wear the skirt and blouse are turned inside out to the print side and the jacket added to the outfit. For the dance at the country culb in the evening, the cape becomes a floor-length skirt and the backless blouse is turned to the print side. If the evening is cool, the bolero jacket completes the ensemble.

More Romance In Home Urged By Radio Expert

Lack of It Is Traced to the Working Wife by Ann Hayes, Visiting Here.

LACK of romance in the home is the basic problem of American social life today, believes Ann Hayes, radio broadcaster, of Kansas City, Mo., who is visiting in Washington. This situation, she maintains, stems back largely to an economic problem—the working wife.

Miss Hayes, who in private life is Mrs. Clara Witt, a wife, a mother, a grandmother and a clubwoman, conducts a daily clinic over the air on social and personal problems. Her mail, she says, reflects to a marked degree a lack of emotional adjustment between husbands and wives. A large part of this is caused, she believes, by the fact that women who must be wage earners are too tired and worried when at home to assume properly the role of homemakers.

"I am not blaming women for this situation," said Miss Hayes. "The great majority of women who work outside the home do so because of economic necessity. But such work takes everything out of a woman, makes her neurotic, nervous and irascible.

Children Suffer.

"She cannot make the type of home that a tired businessman wants to come to at the end of a day, and she is too tired to be feminine, charming, soothing or stimulating. Her children suffer from her mood and in turn become nervous and nerotic. And frequently the man seeks romance and companionship outside the home.

"Work in the business world takes so much out of the average wife that she is not only drained of energy at the end of a day, but she comes to suppress her emotional nature. I think any woman who can possibly manage to live on what her husband makes should remain at home, if she wants to bring the best to her marriage.

"I believe in the equality of men and women, but I think they are different physically and emotionally. A woman, as a rule, cannot stand up to the same regime as a man in the working world and have much left in her at the end of a day. That is why the working wife is an anomaly, and it is an economic tragedy that she exists."

Men Partly to Blame.

Men also are to blame somewhat for the emotional discontent in the home, Miss Hayes believes. This she ascribes less to their inadequacies as lovers than to the fact that they give too much of their vitality to business and to interests outside the home.

"One of the main reasons Latins have the reputation for being good lovers," she said, "is that they take life more leisurely than American men. They don't wear themselves out nervously in the business world and they have something to give to family and social life."

It's not necessary to say why—everyone in Washington knows the tuneful dance music, the tasty cocktails and pleasant atmosphere that distinguishes the Rainbow Room.

My fiance and I love each other deeply, and freely admit it, so it seems strange I should be so "pent up" with him.

• • • •

However, I only see him every two or three months and when he comes, I have to go through a period of getting used to him. When he is absent I am conscious of trying to repress my emotions, and when he is present I can't "let go." We have been going together for four years, off and on, and have been engaged for a year and a half, and my attitude troubles me more and more as time goes on. Please advise me. TROUBLED.

• • • •

The Natural Remedy.

DEAR TROUBLED: It is very likely that emotional inhibitions are responsible for your "blue spells." Correct the one and the other will disappear. If you were happily married, for love, to an intelligent, sympathetic, understanding man, I daresay you would eventually revert to consistently cheerful, warm-hearted normalcy. Your trouble, I daresay, grows out of a lonely, insecure, love-starved childhood, during which you learned to keep a poker face while throttling your emotions at their very source, so that they are paralyzed (or "frigid") for lack of exercise.

• • • •

You need, actually, to be wooed out of this unnatural reserve, and you will owe a great debt of gratitude to whoever tenderly and affectionately undertakes the task. In my opinion, it is doubtful that it can be achieved outside of marriage, for, as I see it, it is a problem involving the full awakening of all your emotions, which can only be safely and properly undertaken in marriage.

• • • •

It is rather unlikely that you will ever altogether outgrow your stiff restraint toward your parents, for the reason that their embarrassment would probably be greater than your own—no matter how responsive and touched they might feel in their hearts—if you were to attempt today to reveal, in words or gestures, the strength and depth of your love for them. Your dammed-up emotions must first find their outlet in mate love (and possibly mother love) before they can extend, with serene sincerity and fullness, to include your parents.

• • • •

I think a better understanding of the nature of your present, entirely remediable handicap, such as could be achieved through a carefully plotted course of reading, would do much toward correcting your moody emotional tension. M. H.

Paris (U.P.).—The April wedding of King Zog of Albania and American-born Countess Geraldine Apponyi was a reminder that navy-blue suits are indispensable—to queens as well as shop girls.

The new Albanian queen stopped in Paris to buy two navy ensembles, also a magnificent white satin wedding gown which Chanel made for her. One of her blue outfits has a straight skirt and a fitted jacket with revers made of a large white Indian silk frill falling softly on each side. The blouse is of the same white Indian silk (tussor) piped in navy blue. A new suede clip, introduced by Molyneux, fastens the jacket. It is a simple thing, made of two long rectangles of suede which clip together horizontally.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, May 29.

ALICE HUGHES.

The newcomers raise the nursery population of this pleasant young couple to five, which is considered very good going here during the throbbing thirties. Young Nelson, who is high in the councils of his pappy's Rockefeller Center, is said to have passed out two cigars to each congratulator in honor of the double. And I learn that the business of achieving offspring is no minor matter (as though it ever were) in the Park avenue canyon.

The minimum cost of a high-priced baby doctor and hospitalization figures at around $1,500, and often runs higher. Layettes and baby clothes as the infant grows reach nearly $1,000. By the time the child can toddle, the darling represents an outlay of at least $5,000. But why be sordid? They are priceless in the hearts of their doting parents, just as they are far down in the depths of the lower East Side. Leading headliners of the day, now at the "cunnin'" stage, are 2-year-old Bill Astor, the little boy of Eddie Duchin and the late Marjorie Oelrichs, a flock of young Rockefellers and the twin daughters of the W. H. Vanderbilts. All guarded like the crown jewels.

• • • •

They even have their own smart clothes shop, called "Tobey's" and run by Mrs. Russell Post and Mrs. Fraser Horn. Even their little sweaters have crossed polo mallets on the chest! They are watched, petted and loved just like any other babies. And I suppose they have just as much fun as the $25 darlings of my childhood. Or do they? I've never been a Park avenue tike, myself.

• • • •

The pop-priced opera at the Center Theater in Radio City made nice money for all, but the management in dinner coats were no end distressed because the audiences brought lunches, in true European style, and scattered the debris all over the lovely house! . . . Just isn't done . . . .

That horrid thunder you heard in the east yesterday was an all-day "jam sign" here in which nearly 50 of the most famous loud bands took part. No—I spent a quiet, restful day in Toronto. Swing poisons me, now.

• • • •

Miss Sally Rand, bubble bouncer and dramatic star, lost a packet, I hear, in helping back Estelle Winwood's production of "The Merry Wives of Windsor," which staggered a few days ago and died on Broadway. Poor Miss Winwood is said to have hocked her gems, and the money went the same way. Art is not only long, but tough . . .!

• • • •

In among the snooty weddings of the season it was nice to note the nuptials of Marion Turpie, famed woman golfer, to Harry McNaughton, the frantic "Bottle" of Phil Baker's radio show. It was a real radio wedding, with Announcer Von Zell as best man and Phil and the heckling "Beetle" in the pews . . .

• • • •

The stores are overflowing with cool cotton frocks these days, and remarkably inexpensive, too. This year they have more style than ever before. And I suppose I needn't add that many of the prints stem from this World's Fair we're supposed to have. Maybe you've heard of it. One has Trylons and Perispheres, the fair theme. Another has the fair's seal in white, against navy. Of course, this is probably strictly local and for sweet publicity's sake. But you might like a Tryon and Perisphere, too—just for a guessing contest!

Survey by Dr. Iva L. Peters Shows Chic Essential to Economic Success; Advises Fashion Study and Careful Planning of Wardrobe.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

"IF YOU WANT to succeed as a career woman, it means merging appearance and brains. Dress is just as positive a stimulus today in the work environment as in the social environment of other days, and the shrewd business woman will do well to weigh its importance in the current scheme of things."

It was Dr. Iva Lowther Peters, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs of New York (who was in Washington for several days) speaking, as we lunched, and she told about her interesting interview study of 212 business and professional women throughout the United States.

"As far back as 1910, about the only occupation open to women was teaching and they dressed the part," said Dr. Peters. "With the entrance of women into the fields of business and professions, the working psychology as well as the appearance status took on a radical change. Now the cut and material of the costume, the right accessories and a smartly becoming coiffure have about the same rating as a college degree. Since women have become so style-conscious, the men have been affected by this trend too, from discussions by their families, the movies and the like, and consciously or unconsciously set a high appearance standard for women in their employ.

Design for Growing.

"Is there a fixed pattern for ambitious career women to follow in regard to grooming?" we asked.

"The woman who knows how to fit into the picture has both brains and diplomacy," Dr. Peters remarked with emphasis. For instance, she pointed out, if you are seeking a job on a hot July day, aim to look cool as well as smart, and the same applies to dressing to appear comfortable on a cold winter-day. Another idea in this category, this authority told us, is choosing the costume in harmony with the section of the country in which you live; environment plus adaptation of the ensemble.

Getting down to dollars and cents, we inquired into Dr. Peters' ideas on budgeting the clothes wardrobe for the business girl of the rank and file salary—one who is not as yet an executive and who gets perhaps $25 a week. "My advice to the business girl whose salary makes it imperative that she plan her wardrobe with discretion," said Dr. Peters "is to buy fewer clothes of good fabrics, well made, instead of an extensive wardrobe made up of cheap things which will not wear or dry clean satisfactorily."

Much can be learned about smart clothes and proper correlation of accessories from window shopping, Dr. Peters commented; that is, if you are in a city which offers such inspiration.

A Close Shave on $5.

"How about the recent statement made by a noted fashion authority that a business girl could plan an adequate wardrobe on only $5 a week," we queried? Dr. Peters' answer to this was that it was possible but would take a lot of close figuring. So many complications enter into a fixed clothes budget, she stated, that a definite amount of money for this purpose is not easily estimated. For instance, if this is the winter you have to buy a new coat, it cuts deeply into the budget. Climate also influences the amount and kind of clothes needed throughout the year; also the extent of your social activities.

Women of today don't show a lack of brain power by making appearance a paramount issue, according to this authority; they have too much good common sense and know how adequately to take care of a job and a wardrobe too. "You owe it to yourself to look as well as you can regardless of your social or business status," Dr. Peters said. But the wise woman will plan her clothes so that they will not detract from her personality; chic but not obtrusive."

In regard to current style trends, she has little criticism and thinks they are on the whole smart and practical. The day of the interview Dr. Peters was attractively attired in a heather wool cape-suit, with printed blouse and hat, shoes, gloves and handbag of dark brown.

YOUR FIGURE, SIR!

By Ida Jean Kain.

TO HEAR THEM tell it, men are never "heavy" eaters and women are always "light" eaters, which makes it difficult to account for all the overweights.

There may be some truth in the contention that you do not overeat, but here is the catch—you eat the wrong foods. Almost invariably, weight trends parallel food habits, and if you are unable to explain an increase in your weight, look over the two lists below and place a check mark at the side of the dish you would naturally order. Be sure that you check the foods you really like, and not the ones you think I want you to like. Your choice between the two foods given on each line will tell the truth about your food habits.

WHICH DO YOU ORDER? This	or	That.
Cream soup		Bouillon.
Pork chops		Lamb chops.
Candied sweet potatoes		Baked potato.
Peas		Spinach.
Head lettuce, with Roquefort cheese dressing		Mixed vegetable salad.
Hot biscuits		Whole wheat bread.
Jelly		Relishes.
Two pats of butter.		One pat of butter.
Apple pie		Fresh fruit.

The Calories Differ.

Well, what is your score? If you have marked as many foods in the bouillon list as in the cream soup list, you are moderate in your food habits and your weight is probably normal. But if 75 per cent of the scoring is on the cream soup side, then fattening dishes are a habit with you, and, to put it mildly, you are not a "light" eater. Or perhaps you liked everything on the first list. Then the probabilities are that your weight is around 20 per cent above normal—or, if not, it soon will be!

Although the two lists contain exactly the same number of courses, the cream soup menu contains, conservatively, 1,800 calories, the bouillon menu about 750 calories.

Food habits are the predominant cause of overweight. When you observe the eating tendencies of the people who regard themselves as "naturally" stout, you find that, in general, they like to eat and that they prefer the rich foods. The normal weights merely follow an inclination to choose foods from the lower calorie brackets.

There are two exceptions to this rule. The person who eats tremendously but remains lean and wiry, and the person who is careful about his or her food intake and still gains because of a short and stocky build, with its low fuel requirements, do not bear out the general statement that food habits are the cause of overweight. You are not likely, however, to be either of these exceptions.

Diets Are Suggested.

Going on a diet to change your weight is of little use unless you change the food habits which control your weight.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Wanted—A Husband.

I.

Nellie McSap is really not a very bright girl,
She loses all her jobs because she can't keep up with the rest.
Who work in her office.
Since she can't make a living where brains are required,
What is to become of her, ask housewives of Midtown,
Unless she gets married and has a home of her own,
And children to care for?

II.

Lena Riffe has never been what you would call strong.
She catches everything and she misses days upon days
From her school-teaching.
It's simply too bad she should work in the buffeting world,
Say the women of Midtown, and they steadfastly agree
That the only solution of all her frailties and ailings,
Is a home and a husband.

III.

Estella Posey is a very difficult girl to handle,
She's extremely odd and she goes off at all sorts of tangents
When moods come upon her.
She's so extremely tempermental that her future's a problem,
To matrons of Midtown, who are righteously hoping,
That some upstanding man with a kind but firm hand,
Will come along and marry her.

IV.

Esther Belle Gadd is near to becoming a town problem.
The way she shocks older people and stay out at nights,
Is the main topic of gossip.
She'll bring disgrace on her family if something isn't done,
Say the dowagers of Midtown, or she doesn't get settled
With household responsibilities, so they're combing the town
For a good man to marry her.

V.

Mamie Chitterling, who means well, but is not quite all there,
Is always to be found making a nuisance of herself
In public places.
There are some who think she should be put in an institution.
Yet Midtown women maintain she might make a nice little wife,
For she's very domestic, and all might run smoothly
If she were once safely married.

'Five-in-One' Dress For the Week-End Gives Versatility

To solve the dress problem of the busy American woman, students of the Cooper Union Art School, New York, have designed an unusual "five-in-one" ensemble.

The "five-in-one" is a four-piece creation of convertible and reversible heavy linen designed by Miss Emmabelle Cook, of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., "for the young lady invited for a week-end." It consists of a backless blouse, a sports skirt, short bolero jacket and flower-print cape.

The cape may be used in walking to and from the beach. Removal of the cape creates a sports costume of short, wide flair skirt and backless blouse. Addition of a bolero jacket makes the costume suitable for shopping in town. For afternoon wear the skirt and blouse are turned inside out to the print side and the jacket added to the outfit. For the dance at the country culb in the evening, the cape becomes a floor-length skirt and the backless blouse is turned to the print side. If the evening is cool, the bolero jacket completes the ensemble.

More Romance In Home Urged By Radio Expert

Lack of It Is Traced to the Working Wife by Ann Hayes, Visiting Here.

LACK of romance in the home is the basic problem of American social life today, believes Ann Hayes, radio broadcaster, of Kansas City, Mo., who is visiting in Washington. This situation, she maintains, stems back largely to an economic problem—the working wife.

Miss Hayes, who in private life is Mrs. Clara Witt, a wife, a mother, a grandmother and a clubwoman, conducts a daily clinic over the air on social and personal problems. Her mail, she says, reflects to a marked degree a lack of emotional adjustment between husbands and wives. A large part of this is caused, she believes, by the fact that women who must be wage earners are too tired and worried when at home to assume properly the role of homemakers.

"I am not blaming women for this situation," said Miss Hayes. "The great majority of women who work outside the home do so because of economic necessity. But such work takes everything out of a woman, makes her neurotic, nervous and irascible.

Children Suffer.

"She cannot make the type of home that a tired businessman wants to come to at the end of a day, and she is too tired to be feminine, charming, soothing or stimulating. Her children suffer from her mood and in turn become nervous and nerotic. And frequently the man seeks romance and companionship outside the home.

"Work in the business world takes so much out of the average wife that she is not only drained of energy at the end of a day, but she comes to suppress her emotional nature. I think any woman who can possibly manage to live on what her husband makes should remain at home, if she wants to bring the best to her marriage.

"I believe in the equality of men and women, but I think they are different physically and emotionally. A woman, as a rule, cannot stand up to the same regime as a man in the working world and have much left in her at the end of a day. That is why the working wife is an anomaly, and it is an economic tragedy that she exists."

Men Partly to Blame.

Men also are to blame somewhat for the emotional discontent in the home, Miss Hayes believes. This she ascribes less to their inadequacies as lovers than to the fact that they give too much of their vitality to business and to interests outside the home.

"One of the main reasons Latins have the reputation for being good lovers," she said, "is that they take life more leisurely than American men. They don't wear themselves out nervously in the business world and they have something to give to family and social life."

It's not necessary to say why—everyone in Washington knows the tuneful dance music, the tasty cocktails and pleasant atmosphere that distinguishes the Rainbow Room.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GRAVY, GRAFT AND ETHICS.

Fortune's wheel spins many an extraordinary person into the seats of government; not to mention many ordinary persons . . . Most are well-behaved, competent, conscientious, and achieve retirement in well-deserved obscurity. But some, alas, have the flexible conscience.

* * * *

Reno Stitley. . . . imaginative.

A few are bitten by the get-rich-quick bug; a very few; a mere handful. The sight of so many flying dollars goes to their heads. They remind me of that favorite book of my childhood, "Twenty Years of Hustling," that immortal autobiography of a Yankee engrossed in the pleasures of making hay.

* * * *

Here's a mild case: The congressman with a $5,000 allowance for clerk hire, whose $2,000 a year secretaries must "kick back" $1,000 to papa.

After all, he writes his more confidential letters in longhand, doesn't he, and feels he earns the extra $1,000.

"—builds an imaginary camp"

And here are four cases charitably classified as more or less "matters of taste":

Almost every government functionary has wondered, when closing an official letter to a colleague with a courteous "remember me to Lulu," whether he shouldn't put a stamp on the franked envelope ("$300 fine, etc.) to be on the safe side . . . Scores of candidates save thousands of dollars postage by sending their campaign blasts out in franked envelopes . . . (No one has ever paid a fine of a dime for misuse of franking, though 1,107,252,468 pieces of franked mail were carried free last year.)

* * * *

This young man's daddy has important connections in Washington, so he bids on a contract with a big firm which has many delicate dealings with the Government . . . P. S. He gets the contract.

But which big firm hasn't delicate dealings with the Government nowadays?

* * * *

An honorable gentleman buys options on thousands of acres of stony land which, who knows, might conceal valuable Carrara marble . . . To his horror, the Government builds a dam, floods his marble, and all he wants is a few million dollars . . . Made into statues it might have been worth much more if there were enough marble.

* * * *

Some young officers are sent to Detroit to inspect a batch of trucks before accepting them for the Army . . . One or two of them accept a magnanimous offer to let them purchase a sedan at wholesale prices.

They'll never be generals now.

"sells a sword for $1,000"

Now the ethical conduct darkens to a deeper lavender . . . A hapless brigadier submits a travel expense voucher for a 500-mile trip . . . All the Army auditor needs to do is look at a table of distances to see that he traveled only 472 miles . . . The Army is tough about such things, and he'll never be a major general.

* * * *

A Congressman gets caught short of funds and sells an appointment to West Point for $1,000 . . . (A West Point education is worth many times $1,000.) There's a hitch in the deal, and he gets a free appointment to a Federal prison.

* * * *

Probably the most brilliant stroke in history was the creation of an imaginary CCC camp by a minor functionary with the euphonious name of Reno Stitely . . . He collected its entire pay roll for a year and even raised the pay of some of his imaginary conservationists . . . Then he bought too fancy a car and was away from his desk one day too long . . . Now he's daydreaming in a cell.

* * * *

Fortunately, such instances of pink, lavendar or purple ethics are rare . . . Patriots have a feverish conception of Government as dripping with graft . . . But the graft exists mostly in that Cherokee strip, the triangular no-man's land between Government, politics and business, and there's more of it in the low places than the high . . . One of the loftiest officials in Washington is now $55,000 in debt, poorer than when he came to Washington, from trying to live at his proper official gait on his official salary—which happens to be his sole source of income.

Senate Aspirant Is Father at 67

Columbus, Ohio, May 29 (AP).—George White, former Ohio Governor and a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, became the father of a sixth child today. Democracy's Need Seen as Christianity

Dr. H. W. Burgan Warns Against Threats of Dictatorships.

Because prevailing lawlessness, greed, fear and government inefficiency in some places all seem to make dictatorships appear attractive and efficient, in comparison, in men's minds, democracy today finds itself again seriously threatened, Dr. H. W. Burgan warned his congregation yesterday morning at Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church.

"They see dictators doing as they please and getting away with things that could not have happened 25 years ago," he pointed out.

"To save democracy," he declared, "the philosophy underlying Christianity must be employed, or political freedom will be swept from the face of the earth and those who died for it, and whom we honor on Memorial Day will have died in vain."

"Political and religious freedom have always intertwined, have always risen and fallen together," said the cleric, explaining it was on Aldersgate street, in London, where John Wesley, founder of Methodism, had his "heart-warming" experience which brought to him and his followers a sense of spiritual freedom, that Sir Edwin Sandys and his group—the English forerunners of Washington, Jefferson, Adams and Madison—met to devise a way to break the bonds of autocracy and set the people politically free. "Thus, American democracy was cradled in Aldersgate street," he asserted.

"Our privileges of democracy are much higher today than they were at the time of our founding," the Rev. Dr. Burgan said, "because we are enjoying the fruits of the struggle for liberty. Unless the principles for which our forefathers died become the principles on which we stand, everything will be lost."

Evidence Guild

Application of moral principles to problems of wages, private ownership of property, labor unions and State was urged yesterday afternoon by Mgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, speaking at the Catholic Evidence Guild services in Franklin Park.

Discussing the all-important question of wages, from the point of view set forth in the papal encylical often referred to as the "Reconstructed Social Order," he asserted "the living wage should be enough, not only to supply a man and his family with the necessities of life, but should enable him to make provision for the future and for the hazards that beset the average person in his lifetime. Where the employer is unable to pay a 'living wage,'" he said, "he and the employe should come to an agreement that is for their mutual benefit."

Speaking in favor of effective labor organizations and collective bargaining, controlled by legislation fair to all parties concerned, he characterized as "criminal injustice" prevention of organizing of workers where capital was at the same time given permission to organize.

Christ Episcopal

Despite efforts being made to stamp it out, the church of the future will be more powerful, more united and more effective than ever, said the Rev. Edward Gabler, rector of Christ Episcopal Church, preaching Sunday morning at the services marking the congregation's 144th anniversary.

Paying tribute to the founders of the church, he declared that "we owe a profound debt of gratitude to our forefathers who made this church possible, and that debt can only be repaid by holding fast to the ideals which guided them."

National Baptist

"The Metropolitan Police Department, in its duties of law enforcement, has always had the splendid support of the church in maintaining an orderly community," said Maj. Ernest W. Brown, head of that organization, speaking last night at the National Baptist Memorial Church.

Fall Fatal to Kay, Guard of Senate

A fractured skull suffered when he fell down the steps at his home Friday, May 13, yesterday proved fatal to William A. Kay, 69, guard at the main entrance to the Senate.

Kay, who lived at 138 Thirteenth street southeast, died at Providence Hospital. For many years a resident of Birmingham, Ala., Kay was appointed to a Senate guard in 1933 by Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, then Senator from Alabama.

3 Men Held in Club Robbery; Gang Hunted in 4 Raids Here

Three colored men were under arrest at Second Precinct Station last night in connection with the robbery at Chevy Chase Country Club Friday. Police, meanwhile, were searching for a gang of Anacostia robbers.

Montgomery County police arrested the suspects—all former employes of the club, at their home in 2300 block Georgia avenue northwest. Three bottles of liquor, one of which bore a Montgomery County tax stamp, were found in the house, they said.

One of the prisoners gave his age as 64, the others as 24 and 28.

William F. Drinkard, 65, night watchman at the exclusive club, was bound and gagged Friday night and the clubhouse robbed of $150 and 11 bottles of whisky.

Four identical robberies were staged between 2:30 a. m. and 8 a. m. yesterday within four Anacostia blocks.

Two doors from Quinn's establishment, the intruders struck again, rifling a filling station cash register of $6, according to Arthur H. Levy, 712 Twelfth street northeast, the operator.

Two blocks away they broke into a filling station operated by John C. Shreve at 3900 Nichols avenue southeast. A cigarette machine and pay telephone were smashed and the coin boxes taken.

The last burglary took place in 3300 block South Capitol street. Abraham Ellis, 3209 Nichols avenue southeast, reported his barbecue stand had been entered and the music box, cigarette machine and telephone looted.

D. C. Professor Warns of Rise Of Fascist Peril

Dr. Furfey Calls on All Christians to Defeat the Menace.

"Inequality of justice in America was assailed and Catholics warned of the totalitarian menace in the country by Dr. Paul Hanly Furfey, head of the department of sociology at Catholic University, in the ninety-first annual baccalaureate address yesterday afternoon at St. Francis College, Loretta, Pa.

The Washington educator called upon all Christians of America to help defeat the totalitarian state system which is rising on the horizon.

"We seem to be so few and our enemies so powerful and well organized. I am referring to the totalitarian, that bestial system such as has been instituted under unholy fascism and still worse communism.

Criticizing the courts, he said, "In Washington we have erected a Supreme Court Building which stands today as a monument to injustice. We have spent $2,000,000 to perpetuate the inequality of justice.

"International charity," he said, "is a solution to the economic and political turmoil today. The reason for our present sufferings is a lack of charity on the part of those who control the money. It is calloused indifference."

Contentment Lies With Adjustment, Abernethy Avers

The secret of a contented life will be found only when "you have adjusted yourselves to each other, your task and environment," the Rev. William S. Abernethy, of Calvary Baptist Church, told students of the Marjorie Webster School in a baccalaureate address last night.

"The world is all out of adjustment today," the speaker told nearly 50 students gathered at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. "That is what is wrong with humanity."

"Contentment is not ease, not complacently folding your hands and submitting to conditions about you that may be outrageously bad. A situation that can be changed ought to be changed and then we must adjust ourselves to it."

A physical education demonstration and dance recital tonight at 8 o'clock at the school gymnasium will precede final commencement exercises on Thursday evening at 8. The Rev. Peter Marshall, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will deliver the commencement address.

William Stanley's Wife Is Injured in Three-Car Crash

Mrs. Mary G. Stanley, wife of former Assistant Attorney General William G. Stanley, suffered a fracture of the pelvis yesterday when the car in which she was riding with her husband and daughter, Mary Jane Stanley, was involved in a three-car collision at Three Maples, Md., near Berwyn.

Stanley accompanied his wife in an ambulance to Garfield, where her condition was said not to be serious.

Witnesses said a car driven by George L. Schutz stopped on the ahighway near Three Maples preparatory to turn into a side road, and was struck by the Stanley car, which veered into a third one. None of the occupants of the other cars was injured.

Elizabeth Snowden Stanley, 18-year-old daughter of the Stanleys, was killed in an automobile accident near Gibson Island, Md., in 1936.

Young Matron Takes Own Life On Long Island

Mrs. Henry Sanford, Jr., Daughter-in-Law of D. C. Resident.

By the Associated Press.

St. James, N. Y., May 29.—Mrs. Henry Sanford, jr., 23, socially prominent Long Island matron, was found shot to death in her home here today, and Coroner Glover Silliman said she was a suicide.

The death occurred as her husband, a maid and cook were downstairs. The three reported they heard a shot and, investigating, found Mrs. Sanford in bed upstairs with a bullet wound in the chest.

Dr. Silliman said he believed Mrs. Sanford, married about five years, was depressed because of the illness of her 4-year-old son. Another child, a 2-year-old daughter, also survives.

The Sanfords are listed in the social register as belonging to a number of prominent New York clubs. Mrs. Sanford was the former Rose Davis, of Newport, R. I.

Her husband, who is 30, is the son of Henry Sanford, sr., of Washington, D. C., and a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Edgar and of the late Samuel Sanford, music professor at Yale University.

Two Girls Hurt As Truck Hits Auto at Corner

Long Island Youth Accused of Failure to Yield Right of Way.

Three persons were injured last night when a car driven by Ralph P. Piffath, 19, Great Neck, Long Island, collided with a truck operated by R. A. Nesbaum, Mount Airy, Md., at the intersection of Albemarle street and Nebraska avenue.

Those injured were Agnes Drew, 19, of 2935 Upton street northwest, who suffered a fractured collar bone, and Rita Gilmore, 19, of the same address, who also was admitted to the hospital, suffering with shock and bruises. William McGown, 19, student at Georgetown University, was cut on the right leg.

Piffath, whose car was badly damaged in the accident, was charged with failure to yield the right of way and will be arraigned in court tomorrow.

Mrs. Charlotte M. Fortier, 52, of Exeter, N. H., received cuts and bruises yesterday when she was struck by an automobile while crossing the street at Massachusetts and New Jersey avenues northwest. Police said the automobile was driven by Milton A. Henderson, colored, 23, of Silver Hill, Md. He was charged with driving with bad brakes.

Matilda Rose, 20, 6615 Fifth street northwest, suffered severe lacerations to the face when the car in which she was riding collided with an auto operated by Theodore P. Hamilton, 26, 128 Maryland avenue, Hyattsville, Md. Hamilton received minor cuts. John K. Shipe, 20, of 3801 Kanawha place northwest, driver of the car occupied by Miss Rose, was uninjured. The accident occurred in Hyattsville at the intersection of Franklin street and the Washington-Baltimore boulevard.

Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., retired, last night fought a brief skirmish, aftermath of his Nicaraguan campaign ten years ago, in the Rialto Theater, and declared the American people should adopt as their eleventh commandment "Mind your own business" in foreign relations.

In defiant tones, Butler told delegates to the National Antiwar Congress that "no one can come over here and stay five minutes, let alone conquer America." More than 1,200 persons attended.

Asserting America's national anthem should be "Home, Sweet Home," Gen. Butler recommended that the American people decide on the following program to stay out of war:

Fight no war, except one of invasion.

Refuse to use economic boycotts and starve women and children.

Let American concerns doing business abroad protect their interests by insurance, and keep the fleet home.

Hold the politicians, not the admirals and generals, responsible for American foreign policy.

Replies to Critic.

It was on the latter note that Gen. Butler began speaking after a former Nicaraguan soldier, who introduced him, asked him what he had gained by leading the Marines into Nicaragua, except to sow hatred in the hearts of a whole people.

Salomon de la Selva, who fought against the Marines, was later exiled from Nicaragua, and is now chairman of the Latin-American historical studies in Mexico City, said his people had retained a "bitter killing hatred for Smedley Butler."

Butler pushed de la Selva from the microphone and declared that "my friend is under the impression the Marines go to these countries voluntarily."

"I was ordered to go to Nicaragua with a job to do and I did it," he said.

Recalling the Spanish-American and World Wars, Butler said that "the force in all this rubbish is sound, like the drums in the jungle."

"That's all we have—government by sound instead of sound government."

Praises U. S. Policy.

Speaking earlier, de la Selva praised the United States' recognition of Mexico's right to expropriate a foregin-owned property, and asked help from the United States in persuading Great Britain to adopt the same policy.

Youngest speaker of the evening was 10-year-old Barbara Penningroth, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who said:

"We want our elders to vote against war. We are the children of America, and we will be the ones to suffer if another war comes along. We would be the ones asked to fight and we would have to pay the war debts long after all the grown-ups, including President Roosevelt, were dead and gone."

Other speakers were R. J. Thomas, vice president of the United Automobile Workers of America; Tucker Smith, of the U. A. W. A. educational staff, and Henrietta McGhee, colored worker for the Southern Tenant Farmers Union. Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary for the International Women's League for Peace and Freedom, presided.

A Midget Cast Gives Director A Bad 80 Days

Lilliputian 'Western' Poses Problem of Keeping Stars on Ponies.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Lazy-A Rranch, Chatsworth, Calif., May 29 (U.P.).—A wisecrack, which turned into a movie production, gave the cowmen an eyeful here today as Hollywood's first troupe of midgets starred the Western picture designed to end all Western pictures.

With his troupe of 37 undersized performers surrounding him and his harried director wondering how he ever would bring the picture in on schedule, Producer Jed Buell told why he decided to make his freak movie.

A one-time press agent who isn't insulted if he's called a "quickie" producer, Buell said he was talking one day with a group of his associates.

"And one of the props cracked that if I kept on trying to keep expenses down, I'd probably use midgets for actors," Buell chuckled. "That struck me as a good idea—and that's what I'm doing. Only the expenses are going up; not down."

Signed All Midgets in Sight.

Buell signed every midget performer he could find under exclusive contract. Thus it was that last week M.-G.-M. discovered it had to come to him for four midgets it wanted to use in a sequence of "Marie Antoinette."

"So I told 'em I'd be glad to lend 'em some of my performers," he said, "but that they'd have to make a trade. I said I'd take Clark Gable in exchange. You should have heard 'em scream."

Buell did lend his midgets to M.-G.-M., after he'd had his joke and then started production here in the wilderness 50 miles north of Hollywood on his "Terror of Tiny Town." Its a straight Western cow opera, with Indians and robbers and stage coach holdups and all the rest. Only midgets take all the parts. They ride Shetland ponies, worry about the injustices the world forces upon them, and somehow manage to make cow operas in general look exceedingly funny.

Buell got 16 members of his company from the Singer Midget Troupe, which was appearing in Hawaii a few weeks ago. Among them was Charlie Becker, the 44-year-old goateed camp-cook of the picture. He's about 3½ feet tall and weighs perhaps 60 pounds.

One of the villains of the piece is Billy Platt, 65 years old, deeply wrinkled, and possessed of a piping soprano voice. The heroine is Yvonne Morey, 21-year-old beauty from New York, whose full-sized mother is acting as her chaperone.

The man with the real troubles was Sam Newfield, veteran Western director. He said he usually made a cow opera in five days flat, that he had an eight-day schedule on the "Terror" and that he didn't think even that would be long enough. His difficulty, he said, was keeping his midgets on their ponies long enough for shots. They always are falling off.

Belasco

Two sterling films of foreign origin were revived at the Belasco Theater yesterday to form a double-feature bill of unusual distinction. These individually successful pictures, now combined in a single program, are "Mayerling" and "The Life and Loves of Beethoven."

"Mayerling" is based on the mystery of the death of the Crown Prince Rudolph, of Austria, and the Baroness Vetssera, the one great love of his life. The story is one that is heavily fraught with court intrigue, the young prince's profligacy and the spectacular events leading up to the double tragedy that has long stood as one of the unsolved puzzles of European royalty.

The pivotal roles are played with consummate skill by Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux, under the direction of Anatole Litvak, all three of whom now are under contract in Hollywood, largely as a result of the superlative excellence of this picture. The play is interpreted entirely in French, with English superimposed subtitles which give only a fragmentary insight into the full flavor and power of the dialogue. The acting is sufficiently vivid, however, to make the import of the drama entirely clear to American audiences.

"The Life and Loves of Beethoven," originally released under the title of "Beethoven's Great Love," also deals intelligently, romantically and powerfully with a great figure in music. The title role is played by that richly gifted French actor, Harry Baur, supported by an able cast of foreign artists. This also is played in French.

Added effectiveness is given "Beethoven" by the generous utilization of some of the composer's most notable works.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Helen Hayes Is Top-Ranking Actress In Poll of 'Ten Great Performances'

Washington Star Has Long Lead at Two-Thirds Mark in Ward Morehouse Symposium of Distinguished Opinion; Mr. Morehouse Is a Flatterer; June Bookings at Earle; Notes of the Theater and Its People.

THE recapitulation of the voting in the first 100 contributions to his symposium of "Ten Great Performances," published in the New York Sun of May 19, in the "Broadway After Dark" column conducted by Ward Morehouse, showed Washington's own Helen Hayes to be far in the lead as foremost actress in the contemporary American theater in the estimation of literate and discriminating playgoers on both sides of the Atlantic.

BELL.

This second summary of the balloting in this interesting examination of the tastes of distinguished theater patrons also marks a sharp advance in favor of Katharine Cornell, who now ranks next to Miss Hayes, having supplanted Maude Adams, now in fifth place.

The players in the "first ten," in point of audience approval, and the number of votes received out of the first 100 individual selections submitted and printed in the informative Morehouse column, are as follows: Helen Hayes, 53 votes; Katharine Cornell, 37 votes; Jeanne Eagels, 29; Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, as an inseparable acting alliance, also 29; Maude Adams, 28; John Barrymore, 27; Mrs. Fiske, 20; John Giegigud, 16; Ethel Barrymore, 15, and David Warfield, 15.

Close behind the "first ten" group come such players as George M. Cohan, Mme. Alla Nazimova, Richard Mansfield, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, Pauline Lord, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, Booth and Nat Goodwin. There also has been support for Jane Cowl, Judith Anderson, Holbrook Blinn and Lionel Barrymore.

In conducting his illuminating poll, Mr. Morehouse has solicited opinion from distinguished and more or less celebrated members of all the professions, high dignitaries of the Government, members of the United States Senate and House of Representatives and other thoughtful observers of the passing theatrical scene. The voting represents the expression of old and young and in its results, so far, has embraced the best performances behind the footlights from an earlier generation down to the present—which reflects all the more glory upon Helen Hayes.

There are still 50 more lists of ten to be published in this far-flung canvass, which was begun last January 22. It is not impossible that these remaining 50 may considerably shift the standings of those now in the lead. One doubts, however, that Miss Hayes will be dislodged from the top spot.

• • • •

Mr. Morehouse, by the way, is not above an occasional indulgence in a subtle form of flattery. It has come to my attention, from an entirely different source, that in his "Broadway After Dark" column in the Sun of Wednesday, May 25, he quoted a considerable portion of this column's summary of the Washington season, appearing in the Sunday Post of May 22. He seemed particularly interested in the flat failures and the pre-eminent successes of the past Washington season of living drama and did not pause to dally around with the betwixt and between offerings that were neither conspicuously good nor abysmally bad. Anyhow, thanks for the buggy ride!

Having wound up the month of May in a blaze of Technicolor glory with "The Adventures of Robin Hood," the Warner Brothers Earle Theater plans a continuation of superior bookings through the month of June, according to announcement made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette.

Beginning on Friday of this week, June 3, the major screen attraction will be Columbia Pictures' new film version of "Holiday," costarring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant. This is the film that prompted Columbia to placard the country with billposters pertly inquiring, "Is it true what they say about Katharine Hepburn?" We shall soon find out. The stage bill for the week will be coheadlined by the Three Stooges, a trio of amiable but slightly raucous buffoons, and Happy Felton and his radio orchestra and entertainers.

Following "Holiday," the Earle has scheduled "Gold Diggers in Paris," latest edition of the annual music and fun show, in which will be seen and heard Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane, Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins and the famous "Gold Digger Girls," a group of the West Coast's handsomest choristers. The stage that week will feature Harry Anger's "World's Fair Revue," headlining the Lottie Mayer Disappearing Water Ballet, with ten dancing and diving beauties who will cavort in a specially constructed tank on the Earle stage. Art Frank, the "veteran playboy," and the Virginians, favorite singers, also will be featured.

Listed for the third week in June, are "Crime School," now in its third week at the Strand Theater in New York, and Gene Krupa and his famous swing orchestra, making its first Washington appearance. Krupa was last seen in the Capital as a member of Benny Goodman's Orchestra last spring. "Crime School" will present the famous kids from "Dead End," with Humphrey Bogart and Gale Page.

"White Banners," based on the best-selling novel by Lloyd C. Douglas, author of "Green Light," will be the final June screen attraction, with Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Jackie Cooper and Bonita Granville in the principal roles. On the stage, an unusual treat will be offered in the personal appearances of Andriana Caselotti, who was the voice of Snow White, and Harry Stockwell, the voice of Prince Charming, in Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Rufe Davis and Sam Hearn also will be on this bill.

What is so rare as a play in June?

In passing, attention might be called to the fact that there will be special holiday matinees in all of the Warner neighborhood theaters today. The matinee performances will begin at 1 p. m., in all theaters, with the exception of the Ambassador and Apollo, where they will get under way at 2 p. m., and 12:45 p. m., respectively. So now you know.

The postmen and messenger boys have been hopping about in what is technically known as fine fettle these past few days.

Under date of May 27, comes this from Arthur A. De Titta, major domo of Fox Movietone News in Washington: "Col. Jason S. Joy, director of public relations for the Twentieth Century-Fox studios, is arriving here next week (that would be this week—Ed. Note.) from Los Angeles to confer with Navy officials regarding 'Splinter Fleet,' which will shortly go into production. It is proposed to make some scenes at the United States Naval Academy. John Ford will direct. Richard Green, British actor, whose first American film was "Four Men and a Prayer' and who is currently with Sonja Henie in 'My Lucky Star,' will play the lead. Broadway's Nancy Kelly and Slim Summerville are slated for the cast, which has not yet been completed."

Then, under date of May 28, comes this from Bob Du Pont, clever juggler on the stage bill at the Earle: "Many thanks for your kind notice in the twenty-fifth, issue of The Washington Post, I have saved your reports over a great number of years, as I played with my wife, billed as The Du Ponts, time and time again at the old B. F. Keith Theater for Mr. Robbins. Those were the happy days, two a day and an act could give its best, but when a performer has to do five shows day in and day out, it is humanly imposible to give perfect shows at all times, especially opening days, after long overnight trips and 8 o'clock rehearsals. Only two months ago I doubled from the Radio City Music Hall into the Astor Hotel, in New York, doing eight performances a day for two weeks and as I eat an apple every show I consumed 112 apples in that time. Nice work, if you can stand it! It is true I did miss a lot in the third show, when you caught the act, and your criticism was justified, but I am happy that I had the opportunity to make good in subsequent performances."

Then on Thursday night, "getaway night," along came the messenger with the "blind" package, which proved to contain a very elegant cravat and handkerchief with a "thanks for everything" note from Sammy Kaye, who had just closed at Loew's Capitol. There really was nothing to thank me for, for I only wrote what I honestly thought—that Sammy has one of the finest orchestras and revues now on the boards. The audience reception he received here ought to have proved that to him.

But I am wearing the necktie and the handkerchief—with a deep sense of gratitude for the kindly thought, as goes without saying.

Ol' Massa Ed Kuykendall, national president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, who has been a sojourner in the Capital for many weeks, left Washington Saturday night for Columbus, Miss., to be at home with "Pete," who is by way of being Mrs. Kuykendall, for the celebration of their twelfth wedding anniversary. My warmest congratulations to these friendly people, in which I probably am joined by every showman in the city. Ol' Massa Ed will be back in about ten days, so he says. "Pete" will have something to say about that, however, so I wouldn't be too sure!

Spelling-Bee Note.

They are screening "Kidnapped" for the drama desks at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon—with two "p's." Maybe Robert Louis Stevenson looked it up in that antedated dictionary he had. Or did he need one?

Opera Comrades.

Harpist Actress.

Stars Awaited by Capital Fans

Above, the incorrigible Charlie McCarthy, his mentor, Edgar Bergen; Andrea Leeds and Adolphe Menjou—reading, of course, in the usual direction—all prominently cast in John M. Stahl's production of "Letter of Introduction," for Universal release. It will be coming along shortly and will need no "letter of introduction." Inset—Happy Felton, who brings his orchestra to the Earle stage on Friday to coheadline the vaudeville bill with the Three Stooges.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, May 29.

SOCIAL NOTES: Mr. Tom Girdler, the steel boss, attended the Steel Institute's dinner and then decided that he'd like to visit one quiet place before retiring . . . A nice, quiet place, where he could relax, unnoticed . . . Mr. Girdler walked into the Versailles—where, at nearby tables, sat an editor, two Broadway columnists and John Edgar Hoover.

• • • •

POLITICS: Alf Landon dined at Tom Dewey's home Wednesday evening. The District Attorney arrived one hour after dinner time—because of the Jimmy Hines case . . . Harry Newman, who publishes Judge magazine, was present. Newman is the one who once boxed 3 rounds with Bob Fitzsimmons during an exhibition tour . . . "That's nothing," Landon declared. "I had one round with a feller named Roosevelt—and THAT was a fight!"

• • • •

THEATER DEPT.: When "White Horse Inn" was presented in New York, the contract provided that Herr Muller was to be brought from Europe to assist in the production . . . Muller was advised to eliminate one line from the script because it wasn't a funny line . . . "Listen," he protested, "that line has remained in the script in all the countries where it's been playing—two years in London, three years in Prague, two years in Berlin—and no laughs" . . . "Then why do you keep it in if it gets no laughs?" he was asked . . . Muller shrugged his shoulders and explained: "Maybe it will."

• • • •

MOVIES: Next month Twentieth Century-Fox will start to film a new picture in which the Dionne Quintuplets will appear . . . The movie will be called "Five of a Kind."

• • • •

BUSINESS DEPT.: Commander Attillio Gatti, the Italian explorer, is scheduled to leave for the Belgian Congo next week, to make some travel pictures there for Warner Bros. . . . His equipment will feature an air-conditioned trailer . . . Gatti, however, is staying up nights, trying to solve one problem . . . For, while the trailer is the most perfect one extant and will provide an ideal home in the jungle, medical advisers have warned Gatti that if he so much as sticks his nose out into the Congo air, he'll come down with the worst cold that ever befell a jungle-lover.

• • • •

CRIME DEPT.: Scotland Yard at last has recognized that it can learn a few things from America's crack G-Men . . . Inspector Leslie, of Scotland Yard, now is in Washington, taking the special training course given to future members of the Federal Bureau of Investigation . . . His visit is on an exchange basis. Special Agent M. A. Acers, of the F. B. I., now is at Hendon in England, studying the methods employed at Scotland Yard.

• • • •

ART DEPT.: For more than a year Reginald Marsh, the artist, worked on a series of murals at the Custom House. Before he was permitted to begin this work Marsh had to be placed upon the WPA rolls . . . The murals feature scenes of the various steps in docking the Queen Mary . . . Mr. Marsh painted the Queen Mary in almost every panel of the murals, completed the work, resigned from the WPA—and then immediately sailed for Europe, in the most elegant suite on the Queen Mary.

• • • •

TRAVEL DEPT.: George M. Cohan was reminiscing with Lou Holtz of the days when he trouped with the Four Cohans through every town in America . . . "And I mean it when I say 'every town,'" Cohan stated . . . "Now wait a minute," Holtz challenged. "I was brought up in a town near San Francisco and it was so small I'll bet you never played there" . . . "Did it have an opera house?" Cohan asked . . . "Yes," Holtz informed . . . "Then," Cohan assured, "I played there."

• • • •

LOST AND FOUND DEPT: Harry Kurnitz, who, as Marco Page, won the recent Dodd Mead Prize, went to Hollywood, where he completed the screen adaptation of his book for M.-G.-M. . . . He went to N. Y. for a vacation, returned to Hollywood—and discovered that his original screen play had been rewritten so that even he, the author, couldn't recognize it . . . "What happened?" Kurnitz demanded . . . "We've made one slip," was the confession. "The screen play has been lost." . . . "You've made two slips," Kurnitz replied. "Because, after all, I still have the book and can write the script all over again." . . . The lost screen play immediately was "found."

In HOLLYWOOD With Hedda Hopper

HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., May 29.—Life is stranger than fiction. After Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers beat all records as a starring team, Fred decided to go on his own. He'd do an occasional picture with Ginger. But he just had to prove to himself and the world that he could stand without his sister Adele or Ginger Rogers.

What he actually proved was that Burns and Allen were a fine comedy team, if given the right material, and they were given it in "Damsel In Distress," and that Ginger Rogers was a dramatic actress and comedienne.

Ginger took "Vivacious Lady" for a new high. Astaire's sets were formerly closed to all visitors, but now open house is the order of the day on the "Carefree" set. Mrs. Astaire hasn't called yet, which always helps. Nothing makes a member of the opposite sex so self-conscious as a wife or husband watching, with a microscopic eye, love scenes—hard enough to do under any circumstances. Those delicate, intimate, sweet moments you see are made under at least 40 pairs of technical eyes. Technicians are too busy watching their own end of it to make the players self-conscious.

Ginger gave a new kind of birthday party on the set, with cake and trimmings for "Clarkie," former actress, now beloved wardrobe woman. Ginger led the singing and gave her beautiful blankets for her new house. Fred contributed a check and the director and crew joined in with more presents.

In other words, Ginger's presence of eminence, poise, sureness of attack has come through remote control—because Fred Astaire wanted to star alone.

Hollywood's never slow and has climbed on the band wagon since Arleen Whelan came through with flying colors in "Kidnaped." Paramount has given seven of their stock girls a real chance with Jack Benny in "Artists and Models Abroad," hoping to fine star quarity.

Little

That amusing and tuneful farcical, romantic melodrama, "The Gay Desperado," was revived on the screen at the Little Theater yesterday, with Nino Martini contributing a wealth of glorious song, and that eminent dialectician, Leo Carrillo, furnishing most of the comedy and thrills, ably abetted by Harold Huber and Mischa Auer.

This is the Mary Pickford-Jesse Lasky production for United Artists in which a marauding group of bandits see an American gangster film and immediately adopt the modern methods of native hoodlums in perpetrating their predatory crimes. When they convert a border motion picture "shooting gallery" into precisely that, Chivo is called upon to quiet them with sweet melodies. This is not difficult, since Briganza, leader of the band, loves music more than he does murder and pillage. He loves music so much, in fact, that he forces Chivo to become a member of his roving company of road agents.

There is a girl in the case, too, with whom Chivo manages to fall in love with no reciprocal affection on her part whatsoever—in the beginning. That all works out later.

In the development of this engagingly novel narrative, there is evident a constant purpose to burlesque all of the gangster melodramas that ever have been filmed. There is a mock execution scene, involving Campo and Diego that is a model of deft caricature.

The piece is played in a truly gay spirit. Martini's voice, of course, is one of the film's chief assets; so is the bravura comedy of Leo Carrillo, as Briganza, the brigand leader—not to mention the drolleries of Mischa Auer and Harold Huber, in the respective roles of Campo and Diego. Ida Lupino is the handsome young woman who finally capitulates to the charm of the young man who sings for fun and pillages under duress. James Blakeley is her young American lover, "snatched" while motoring across the desert. There are many others in the cast who add to the unique quality of an excellent serio-comic entertainment, directed by Rouben Mamoulian.

The companion feature of the bill at the Little continues to be "The Wave," Paul Strand's pictorially beautiful drama of the simple fisher folk of Mexico. Peopled entirely by a native cast, assembled from the small fishing village of Alvarado, "The Wave" takes its place with "Man of Aran" and other unpretentious masterpieces that have proved great in their very simplicity.

*X WASHINGTON: MONDAY, MAY 30, 1938 11

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Take it from a guy who has been in there with both of 'em, Max Schmeling will hit Joe Louis on the chin, come June 22, and knock him out.

And if you are a stickler for details, the knockout punch will be a slightly overhand right delivered while Schmeling is feinting with his left.

POVICH.

It will not be a one-punch knockout. Schmeling will hit Louis many times with that right before Louis finally becomes a case for his seconds to dispose of. It will happen about the eighth round, no later than the tenth.

• • • •

At least, that's the probability as Marty Gallagher sees it. Down at Griffith Farms where, in a bartender's apron, he moves amid the clatter of cocktails in the rough, Marty Gallegher is very positive that Schmeling will become the first man in heavyweight history to regain a lost world's championship.

Bartender Gallager has retired from the prize ring. He found the business of boxing ears unprofitable after a dozen years spent at it. But when he talks of fights, his is the voice of experience. Particularly when he talks of Louis and Schmeling.

• • • •

Mr. Gallagher, take the witness stand.

Q. Mr. Gallagher, what do you know about Joe Louis?
A. I was his sparring partner.
Q. Mr. Gallagher, what do you know about Max Schmeling?
A. I was his sparring partner.
Q. When and where were you in Joe Louis' training camp?
A. Last summer at Jompton Lakes.
Q. Mr. Gallagher what was the occasion?
A. Louis was training for his fight with Tommy Farr.
Q. How long did you train with Louis?
A. Two weeks until——
Q. Until what?
A. Until they paid me off and told me I was too rough.
Q. Too rough, why?
A. They said I was crowding Louis too much—rushing him.
Q. What happened when you rushed him?
A.—They told me it made him look bad. All the New York papers said I was making Louis look bad.
Q.—Did you hurt him?
A.—I don't think so because——
Q.—Because what?
A.—Because they made me fight with 16-ounce gloves and he was using 12-ouncers.
Q.—That made a big difference?
A.—I'll say!
Q.—What do you think about Louis?
A.—He's dumb.
Q.—Why do you say that?
A.—Because he is. If you crowd him, he gets confused. Jack Blackburn, his trainer, has to tell him how to fight back. He can't figure things out for himself.
Q.—For example?
A.—Most of his other sparring partners would try to keep away from Louis. He'll nail anybody who does that. He was surprised when I stayed inside with him. Left himself wide open.
Q.—And Blackburn had to explain things to Louis?
A.—Yes. But Louis doesn't remember very well. He's dumb that way.
Q.—You think Schmeling is smart?
A.—I know it!
Q.—Why do you know it?
A.—I was in there with him.
Q.—When?
A.—When he was training for Paulino.
Q.—How smart is he?
A.—Smart enough to knock your block off. He's shifty and he's a sharpshooter. You never know when he's going to hit you.
Q.—Why not?
A.—Because he looks a little awkward in there the way he carries his hands. He never looks set for a punch.
Q.—Is he?
A.—He's always set for a punch.
Q.—Does he hit as hard as Louis?
A.—No, but——
Q.—But what?
A.—He hits plenty hard.
Q.—Do you think Louis has a glass chin?
A.—No, but——
Q.—But what?
A.—The right punch will knock anybody out.
Q.—Who do you think will win the Schmeling-Louis fight?
A.—Schmeling.
Q.—How?
A.—With one of those nice rights in the eighth round, no later than the tenth.
Q.—Positively, Mr. Gallagher?
A.—Absolutely.

Buddy Sharkey, Gonzaga, who defeated Jim Thompson, Montgomery Blair, yesterday for the metropolitan scholastic golf championship, receives The Washington Post Trophy from Ralph Fowler, president of the District Golf Association, after his 3-and-2 win over the Georgetown Prep links. Feller's Favorite Receiver Breaks Finger; Will Be Out for Two Weeks.

St. Louis, May 29 (AP).—The last-place Browns backed up the excellent hurling of Buck Newsom with a dozen hits off four Cleveland pitchers today to wind up their home stand with an 8-to-6 victory over the first-place Indians.

Newsom held the Indians to four scattered blows until the eighth, when Cleveland rallied with a single, homer and double for two runs. With two away, G. Heath singled to right. Earl Averill hit into the right-center seats for a home run and scored behind Heath, who had parked one on the right-field pavilion roof in the second. Hal Trosky doubled, but died when Keltner struck out to end the rally.

Poffenberger Bests Stratton in Duel.

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Cletus Poffenberger shaded Monty Stratton in a hurling duel today as the Detroit Tigers defeated the Chicago White Sox, 2 to 1, before a crowd of 16,000 and swept the three-game series. Poffenberger yielded only four hits, all singles, for his fourth victory.

Stratton, turning in his second complete game in six days after an eight-week injury absence, allowed only six hits, but was the victim of his own wildness. He gave nine passes, one of which walked a run home.

The White Sox tied the score in the second when Marv Owen singled, stole second, went to third on Ray Hayworth's wild throw and reached home on Luke Sewell's long fly. The Tigers' winning run came

Ed Dixon Hurls A Perfect Game

Ed Dixon pitched a no-hit, no-run game yesterday, struck out 17, only walked 1, and retired the last 23 batters in order as the Gibson Grays shut out the Lyon Village Giants, 8 to 0, on the field at Falls Church.

Pirates Nose Bruins, 2 to 1

Vaughan's Slugging Aids Lucas' Triumph.

Pittsburgh, May 29 (AP).—Floyd (Arky) Vaughan, former National League batting champion, pounded out a home run and a double today to give Fred (Red) Lucas, veteran Pirate right-hander, a 2-1 victory over Larry French of the Chicago Cubs.

The triumph cut a chain of Chicago wins which mounted to nine in ten games prior to today and likewise interrupted the slide of the Pirates, who had dropped eight of the last ten contests.

Both pitchers yielded eight hits with the Cubs making three double plays to back up their southpaw star.

Vaughan's home run in the second came with none on, but after the Cubs scored in the first half of the sixth, the Pirate doubled Lee Handley home with what proved to be the winning run.

Chicago's run was scored by Augie Galan, who singled, stole second

New Champion Forced to Battle for 1938 Championship.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Francis (Buddy) Sharkey, Gonzaga's golfing ace, made his fourth try for the Metropolitan Scholastic championship and The Post Trophy a succesful one yesterday, as he defeated tousel-headed Jimmy Thompson, Montgomery Blair captain, by a 3 and 2 margin at Georgetown Prep after a stubborn 16-hole battle.

Thompson, who was forced four extra holes in a playoff to gain a berth in the championship flight qualifying rounds, gave the heavily favored Sharkey an even match for 13 holes, but the medalist and new champion won the next three in a row to gain a title that had evaded him three times in the semifinal and final rounds.

The margin in favor of either player was never more than a single hole for the first 13, as Thompson, viciously chewing a match stick, kept halving holes and throwing in an occasional win, and the gallery sensed an upset before Sharkey's par finish kept him undefeated in the scholastic ranks this season.

Scores an Upset.

Thompson had scored the first surprise victory of the day in the morning semifinals when he trounced Ray Burgess, Bethesda, by a convincing 4 and 3 margin, while Sharkey was forced to play the back nine in sub-par 34 to win an 18-hole battle with an old rival, Ralph Bogart Wilson, 2 up.

The young Blair High ace won the first hole as Sharkey three-putted—retained the margin through the fourth hole that was halved in birdie threes. A par 5 on the long fifth squared the match for the Gonzaga ace and after halving the next three holes in even 4s, Sharkey played a trap shot stone dead to the cup on the ninth to run 1 up.

Thompson kept plugging and halved three more in a row on the back nine and then evened the count with a par on the thirteenth as Sharkey was in trouble off the tee. With the next hole apparently halved, the Blair representative dumped a short approach into a trap

4-Run Spree In Seventh Beats Yanks

A's Score 11-9 Victory Over Champions in Wild Game.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 29.—Scoring six runs in the third inning and four in the seventh, the Athletics defeated the New York Yankees, 11 to 9, today.

Edgar Smith, who relieved Bud Thomas on the mound in the second inning, and was replaced by Nelson Potter in the eighth, received credit for the victory. Bump Hadlay was charged with New York's defeat.

Thomas was driven from the mound by three New York runs in the first two innings. Bob Johnson's sixth homer of the year, with two Mackmen on base, sent Pearson to the showers in favor of Hadley in the next inning.

The Yanks tied the score at 6-all in the fifth inning with two walks and singles by Rolfe, DiMaggio and Knickerbocker, but the Athletics scored another run on a single by Sam Chapman, a rookie.

The Yanks tied the count again, but the A's seventh-inning spree, with Hadley contributing three walks and a wild pitch, gave Philadelphia the game. Dickey's home run in the ninth with Gehrig on base fell two runs short of tying the score.

Joe Louis Drops Kanner in Drill

Pompton Lakes, N. J., May 29 (AP).—Joe Louis thrilled a large crowd at his training camp today when he dropped Murray Kanner, one of his sparmates, in the second round of their two-round drill.

Speculator, N. Y., May 29 (AP).—A crowd of 3,000 watched Max Schmeling go through his training routine for his bout with Joe Louis today.

Schmeling went five rounds, three with Al Albin and two with Butch Rogers.

New York, May 29.—The Giants tagged Bucky Walters for four runs in the first inning today and then hung on to nip the Phillies, 7 to 6, and increase their National League lead to 3½ games over the Chicago Cubs.

Walters went the route for the Phils. Although he contributed a two-run homer and his mates belted Harry Gumbert, the Giant starter, to the showers, the Quaker City outfit never was able to catch up. Gumbert, who gave way to big Walt Brown, was credited with his fourth win against three defeats.

What proved the Giants' winning run was an eighth-inning homer by Mickey Haslin, the reserve infielder now filling in at second base. This marker put the game on ice and stretched the New Yorkers' winning streak to five in a row.

White Sox Release Cain to St. Paul

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox announced today the outright release of Merritt (Sugar) Cain, veteran right-handed pitcher, to the St. Paul Club of the American Association.

Cain, who won 15 games and lost 11 in 1936, won only four and lost two for the Sox last year. He was charged with one defeat this season.

The Sox obtained him from the St. Louis Browns in exchange for Pitcher Les Tietje in May, 1936.

Cards Blank Reds by 3-0

Weiland Gives Only 2 Hits; Owen Homers.

Cincinnati, May 29, (AP).—Bob Weiland allowed the Cincinnatti Reds two hits today to break the St. Louis Cardinals' seven-game losing streak during their Eastern trip and win, 3 to 0.

Not a Redleg got as far as second base and only three went to first.

Mickey Owen opened the Cardinal scoring in the second with a mighty homer over the leftfield wall. Pepper Martin doubled in the third and scored on Stu Martin's single. Lefty Lee Grisson, pitching his first game since the underwent a tonsillectomy, gave a slow one in the fifth to Martin, who hit hard over second to score Joe Strip.

Cascarella relieved Grisson in the seventh and set the enemy down for one hit and fanned four men.

Wes Ferrell Stops Bosox; Stone Stars

Bats in Three Runs With Double and Triple; Nats Outhit.

By Shirley Povich.

Behind the curve-ball pitching of Wesley Cheek Ferrell who threw a 5-3 defeat at the Boston Red Sox, the Nats advanced into third place in the American League standing yesterday.

In licking Tom Yawkey's expensive Red Sox, Ferrell beat the hand that fed him for three seasons before he was traded to the Nats last summer. But he had a powerful ally in Johnny Stone, who produced two crashing hits that, in turn, produced three Washington runs.

There was no sunshine yesterday at Griffith Stadium, but the Nats made hay in the American League race nevertheless. Because, Coincident with Washington's triumph, the Yankees were taking a beating at Philadelphia and slipping into fourth place and the league-leading Cleveland Indians were losing to the St. Louis Browns. The new arrangement of the league's vital statistics shows the third-place Nats only a half-game behind the second-place Red Sox and only three games out of the lead.

Ferrell's Seventh.

Fifteen thousand customers watched Ferrell record his seventh pitching triumph of the year. But it was no sinecure for the tall right-hander. The Red Sox nudged him for 10 hits while the Nats were getting only 7, and Ferrell was in continual danger after the second inning. But mixing his curves with a new-found fast ball he left 12 Bostonians stranded on the bases.

Manager Joe Cronin sent young Emerson Dickman, late of Little Rock, to the mound against the Nats. He saw his mistake in the fifth inning when Washington knocked the rookie from the box, scored 3 runs, broke a 1-1 tie, and virtually won the ball game.

The hero of that uprising was Johnny Stone, whose slashing single with the bases full, knocked two two pals across the plate.

Stone Opens in First.

Stone, whose recent batting exploits have lifted his average from .210 to a nearly respectable .282, wheeled his big bat into action in the first inning when the Nats took a 1-0 lead after two were out. Taft Wright drew a pass from Dickman and then Stone thumped a hefty two-bagger against the right field wall to score him.

Not until the third inning did the Sox get a man on base against Ferrell, and he scored to make it 1 to 1. He was Gene DeSauteis, Boston catcher, who slashed a hit off Ferrell's glove and beat it out for a single when it caromed across the first-base foul line. Taking second on a sacrifice, De Sautels romped home on Cramer's sharp single to center.

Young Dickman was pitching two-hit ball until the fifth inning, when a muff by Pinky Higgins on Rick Ferrell's hard grounder put him in trouble. Brother Wes sacrificed and then Buddy Myer scored Rick with a crisp single to right. Here Dickman's control deserted him and he walked Lewis. Whereupon Cronin waved him out of the box and the left-handed Fritz Ostermueller in.

Simmons' Pass Fills Bags.

That strategy by Cronin was countered by Bucky Harris with the insertion of Al Simmons to bat for Taft Wright, and Ostermueller couldn't locate the plate against Simmons, walking him and filling the bases. That brought Stone to bat and he didn't dally. On Ostermueller's first pitch he singled over second base, and Myer and Lewis scored with runs that put the Nats in a 4-to-1 lead.

They added their fifth run in the sixth after Wes Ferrell and Buddy Myer singled. Al Simmons produced the run with a line-drive single to center. The uprising was quelled when Myer was run down between third and home on an attempted double steal.

New York, May 29.—Why should the Trojans bother to come East?

In the minds of most of the Nation's track and field experts, Southern California's "wonder team" already has won the sixty-second annual Intercollegiate A. A. A. championships which are slated for next Friday and Saturday at Randall's Island, N. Y.

The Trojan performers, who yesterday walked away with the Pacific Coast Conference title at Berkeley, Calif., are such topheavy favorites to take the I. C. 4-A games that it seems their trek to Randall's Island will be merely a pleasure trip.

* * * *

Eastern clockers estimate that the Los Angeles squad of at least 12 men will register approximately 40 points in winning the 15-event meet this week-end. Yesterday, at Berkeley, the Trojans won the Coast title with 64.6 points, while second-place Stanford had 40.7.

Such high regard among Eastern observers is a fine tribute to the consistent excellence of U. S. C. performances this season and to the coaching of Dean Cromwell. Particularly when one remembers that there will be 30 other colleges competing at Randall's handsome stadium and that the I. C. 4-A field is considered far stronger individually than it was three years ago when the Trojans mopped up at Harvard Stadium for their last similar title.

* * * *

Track and field writers give no other team much chance to score 40 points, not even Pittsburgh which won last year with 30½ points; nor Princeton, the Ivy League champion; nor Michigan State; nor Columbia, last year's runner-up and current indoor champion.

Southern California, which won the title seven times from 1925 to 1935, inclusive, depends for another victory on these performers: Adrian Talley, sprinter; Jim Humphrey, high hurdler; Earl Vickery, low hurdler; Edwin Miller, quarter-miler; Phil Roulac, half-miler; Loring Day and Kenneth Dills, vaulters; Delos Thurber, high jumper; Phil Gaspar, discus heaver, and Chuck Soper, Javelin thrower.

* * * *

In few other sports, where 31 teams are entered from different sections of the country, would we find such general confidence that any one team would win. But track and field performers usually are consistent in their work, barring illness or injury. Now and then the high jumper or pole vaulters have an off-day, but most of the others can be expected to come through according to previous clockings or distance measurements. And Dean Cromwell's well-conditioned athathletes have been unusually consistent in living up to expectations in the past.

Anyway, the Trojans are coming East, already hailed as premeet champions. And the main object of their visit apparently filters down to the question of just how many points they can register as a margin of victory.

Sharkey

and lost to a par, and that was the turning point of the match.

Sharkey went 2 up on the fifteenth, as Thompson was short in two, and the latter drove out of bounds on the next hole and finished with a 6, while Sharkey lipped the cup for a birdie to end the match with a flourish.

The titleholder had par for a 74 as the match ended over the par 70 course, while his opponent was 3 strokes higher.

Buddy, who succeeds Bobby Brownell a schampion, adds his name to Frank Allen, Billy Shea, two-time winner, and Brownell on the handsome Washington Post trophy that goes to the winner's school for a year, while he received a replica of the trophy for permanent possession.

Ralph Fowler, president of the District Golf Association, presented the cup to Sharkey, also the medalist's trophy, while Thompson received the runner-up cup.

Sharkey's victory climaxed a "Gonzaga" year on the links, as the prepmen clinched the Scholastic League title last week, with Sharkey in the role of undefeated captain. With one teammate caddying and another carrying a horse shoe for good luck, in addition to several priests from the school in the gallery, the winner certainly had his well-wishers.

Sunnycroft to Hold Tournament Today

Clarksburg, W. Va., May 29.—The first golf tournament of the season at the Sunnycroft Country Club here will begin tomorrow afternoon, it has been announced by Dr. William C. Baber, director.

At least eight foursomes are expected to compete for prizes offered by Baber. The play will be of the mixed two-ball foursome variety, partners alternating in hitting the ball.

160,000 Due To See Aces Vie for Title

New Record Is Expected If Track Conditions Are Conducive.

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, May 29.—Thirty-three of America's greatest automobile race drivers, ranging from Rookie Joel Thorne to the aging Ira Hall, will roar away from the starting line at 10 o'clock (Central standard time), tomorrow morning in the twenty-sixth annual 500-mile Indianapolis motor speedway race.

For approximately four and one-half hours they will fight a battle of speed over the two and one-half mile brick and asphalt track. To the winner will go checks that will total approximately $35,000. First prize itself is worth $20,000. Lap and accessory awards make up the remainder.

T. E. (Pop) Myers, speedway general manager, predicted tonight the attendance would run in the neighborhood of 160,000.

Bad Weather Seen.

The only possible difficulty was the weather. The United States Weather Bureau here forecast thundershowers for tomorrow. If it rains during the race, the cars are slowed down to about 60 miles an hour and they must hold their positions until the track is dry.

Only once in history has it been necessary to postpone a race. One other time the event had to be stopped at 400 miles because of rain.

Speedway officials and drivers predicted it would take a speed of 115 to 116 miles an hour to win the race. Last year Wilbur Shaw, of Indianapolis, hit a record-breaking 113.580 miles an hour in riding to first place.

Shaw in the Race.

Shaw is one of four former winners who will face the starter. The others are Louis Meyer, of Huntington Park, Calif., three times a victor; Bill Cummings, of Indianapolis, and Kelly Petillo, of Los Angeles, Calif.

Every one of them is in the list of favorites for this year's event. Meyer and Cummings will drive new cars. Shaw will have the same speedster in which he won last year, and Petillo the same car in which he won in 1935.

Two foreign-built cars will be among the starters. An Alfa Romeo will be driven by youthful Rex Mays, of Glendale, Calif., and a Maserati will have Mauri Rose, of Columbus, Ohio, at the wheel.

Both figured as possible winners, but Mays' car is capable of greater speed than Roe's.

Qualifying Events Fast.

The prediction of record speed was based largely on time shown in the qualifying trials. Eighteen of the 33 starters averaged better than 120 miles an hour in 25-mile qualifying runs.

The old track record of 125.287 miles an hour for qualification was broken twice. Floyd Roberts, of Van Nuys, Calif., averaged 125.681 May 21, and the next day Ronney Householder, a neighbor of Roberts, hiked the mark to 125.769 miles an hour.

Tonight Indianapolis took on its customary race day atmosphere. Long lines of automobiles arrived from every State in the Union.

One car has been waiting at the speedway gate since May 2. Tonight its driver had a lot of company. The line strung out for miles. Fans spent the night playing cards, singing and visiting.

Hotels were jammed.

Rollie Hemsley, Cleveland's favorite receiver for Bob Feller, suffered a broken little finger on his right hand on Earl Whitehill's first pitch in today's game. He probably will be out of action ten days or two weeks.

Whitehill gave up six hits before being relieved by Galehouse in the fifth. Red Kress doubled to score two runs and put the Brownies back in front and that was all for Galehouse. Harder allowed three more runs and three hits in two innings before going out for a pinch hitter in the seventh.

Newsom retired seven batters on strikeouts for his fifth win of the season.

Seeds Hits 3 Home Runs as Newark Wins.

Newark, N. J., May 29 (AP).—Bob Seeds, who made history a couple of weeks back when he hit seven home runs in two days, staged another slugging show today in pacing the Newark Bears to a double victory over the Baltimore Orioles, 13 to 8 and 8 to 2.

After socking a pair of round-trippers in the opener, Seeds rapped out his third home run of the day and sixteenth of the campaign in the nightcap. Two were aboard at the time.

Ernie Bonham went the route in the second game for the first time this year and limited the visitors to five hits, including a homer by George Puccinelli, his second of the day.

Seeds' two homers and one by Buddy Rosar, who has been on the injured list since May 5, featured a 13-hit attack for the Bears in the opener.

Fight

formed Georgie's manager, Syd Fishel, that he will set up for young Abrams an attack that will "make him wel-nilgh invincible against Yarosz."

It was Lew Tendler who came to town one night and seconded Lou Gevinson in his debut as a lightweight against Irish Eddie Dunne. And some of the things Tendler told Gevinson worked, for the local Jewish boy won.

Tendler will come to Washington next Monday to be in Georgie's corner.

Tendler has coached many a fighter in his day, and Abrams' manager jumped at the opportunity to have his boy come under some expert tutelage. Fishel has admitted he will leave no stone unturned in an effort to have Georgie in tip-top shape for next Monday's battle. He realizes that victory means much to his 19-year-old protege. A possible shot at Champion Freddie Steele late this summer at the stadium.

Tendler was impressed with Abrams the two times he saw him fight in Philadelphia last season. In one of these matches Abrams flattened Eddie Miles in two rounds.

Wes Ferrell Beats Bosox

Nats

the fourth and the Sox had two on with one out in the fifth, but the big fellow extricated himself nicely. He gave up a run in the sixth after walking Higgins again, because Doerr singled and DeSautels doubled down the rightfield line. With the bases still full, Ostermueller sent a soft liner to Travis for the third out.

Escapes Peril in Seventh.

There was more trouble for Ferrell in the seventh when Vosmik walked and Cronin singled with one out, but he got over the big hump when he disposed of Foxx on a pop to Myer after working the count to three and two. Higgins, however, singled to drive in a run that cut the Nats' lead to 5-3.

After DeSautels' double with one out in the eighth produced nothing, Ferrell found a friend in Buddy Lewis in the ninth. Lewis made a sensational grab of Vosmik's hot smash down the third base line for the first out of the inning and it was well he did because Cronin and Higgins followed with singles that put the tying runs on base.

In that emergency, Ferrell negotiated the last out by forcing Chapman to ground meekly in front of the plate from where Brother Rick chucked him out.

Sargeant Jasper Ties For Legion Loop Lead

Victory Over Pepco Deadlocks It and Police Post; Fort Stevens Wins.

By Perry Wilkinson.

Sergeant Jasper Post, of the American Legion Junior Baseball League, went into a first-place tie with Police Post yesterday by nosing out the Pepco team, 6-5, in a nip-and-tuck tilt played on the West Ellipse diamond. The Police boys defeated Costello, 11-6, in a free-hitting engagement on the North Ellipse field.

Both the clubs, in chalking up their fourth victory in five starts, slammed the ball hard when hits meant runs, and had the pitching when it was necessary to bear down in order to prevent the enemy from pushing a run across the plate. Evans, with three hits in four times at bat, led the Jasper crew at bat, while Bell, in addition to his excellent mound performance, made two hits.

Lovitt, Police Post flinger, hurled four-hit ball and smacked out a triple to aid in the attack that won over Costello. Cohill got three hits in four trips, to lead the winners at bat, and his timely bingle, along with hits by Walsh and Pohutsky, was the spearhead of the attack that sent four runs scampering across the plate in a big fifth inning.

In other Legion games, Agriculture Post, with Roberts allowing only two hits, won a 4-2 game from the Cooley McCoullough team on the North Ellipse field. Even though outhit, Fort Stevens stopped the Nash Post nine, 11-8, on the West Ellipse diamond.

Walter Johnson's Dr. Pepper's team led the Independent games into action by taking a 9-3 victory from the Southern Maryland Young Democratic Club. Leemans and Steele obtained timely hits for the winners.

The Mount Rainier Holbrook Dairy's crew won its ninth consecutive victory by trouncing the Quantico Indians, 10-3. Peter Wynn's triple with the bases loaded was the feature of the tilt. Police No. 10 was another team that ran its string to six straight in setting down the Raymond, nine, 10-7.

Lady Avon Is Winner

Sassy Too, Bobcat Also Regatta Victors.

By Dan Craig.

A fleet of 23 windjammers, the largest number ever to compete in the Potomac River Sailing Association's Memorial Day Regatta, went over an inside course at Gunston Cove, Va., yesterday, and the favorites took advantage of a fair northeast breeze to win both morning and afternoon races.

Judge Prentice Edrington's Lady Avon, Verner Smythe's Sassy Too and the Sea Scout's Bobcat made a clean sweep of the 20-foot, Comet and Class A races. Adrian Gilbert's Swan took the morning event in Class B, but dropped to third in the afternoon event, which was won by Tom Stokes' Rush Too.

In a return to form, Verner Smythe trundeled Sassy Too over the course to take top honors in both morning and afternoon races.

Sassy Too held 15 points to So Big's 10 and Nandua's 11. The race committee indicated at least two of the three would be disqualified.

Sinkquick, skippered by George Danker, won both lass A races on elapsed time, but dropped to second in the first and last in the second on corrected time. Bobcat, handled by Dan Rabenhorst, squeezed by for first time in the morning and won in the afternoon by a wide margin.

Dr. R. W. Barnhard's little catboat, Blackcat, showed an immaculate pair of heels to the Class B's in both races, but corrected time gave her two seconds. In the afternoon Tom Stokes' moth, Rush Too, turned in the best time of the fleet, negotiating the course in 1:04.03, which was good enough to beat every comet but Sassy.

On point standing for the two races, Rush Too, Blackcat and Swan were less than a point apart. Little Dipper, of Culley Cobb, was fourth and Eleanor was sixth.

Celtics Defeat Air Station, 6-4

Alexandria, Va., May 29.—The Celtics won their fourth straight game here today at the expense of the Naval Air Station nine, 6 to 4. Although outhit, 12 to 7, the locals came through with a half-dozen fine fielding plays. "Butch" Wood, youthful right-hander, turned in a well-pitched game, particularly effective in the pinches. Russ Kidwell drove in three of the Celts' runs.

Georgetown Golf.

Georgetown University golfers and an eight-man team from the Glen Echo club will meet today at 1 p. m. Capital members will also compete in a flag tourney in the morning.

Man of the Month

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties' "Man of the Month.")

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Johnny Stone increases his lead in the Man of the Month contest with his brilliant hitting yesterday, but the bulk of the day's points go to Pitcher Wes Ferrell.

TO FERRELL, five points, because he pitched a masterful game in restricting the Red Sox to three runs while allowing ten hits, and because his neat sacrifice and clean single figured in two of the Nats' five runs.

TO STONE, three points, because his long double off the wall drove in the first Washington run and because his slashing single with the bases full in the fifth virtually won the ball game.

TO BUDDY MYER, one point, because he drove in one run with his two clean hits and figured in two others.

TO AL SIMMONS, one point, because in the sixth inning he hit a vicious single to center to drive in what appeared to be an important run for the Nats.

Jeem's Sore! So He'll Roll On to Europe!

But Only After He Opens Outdoor Mat Season Here.

Like Old Man River, Jim Londos keeps rollin' along.

The Gorgeous Greek rolls into town Thursday night for the first outdoor wrestling show of the season. He meets Bobby Bruns.

After that he rolls along to Zanzibar, Vladivostok, Weihaiwai, Rangoon, Sidney and points east.

For a man near 50, with something like two million cocoanuts salted away in one savings bank and another, Jeem does a lot of world cruising. And it isn't all for the shekels, either, the former world's champion wrestler tells one and all.

Jeem shoves off late this week for Europe. That is, after he wrestles Bruns at Griffith Stadium. He makes it clear that he comes here as a distinct favor to Joe Turner, the town's mat promoter and its greatest mat addict.

Jeem is definitely peeved at the various and sundry mat circuits who have their individual champions and won't let him have a crack at each. Because there's one thing Jeem loves and that's a title.

If he doesn't get it—or a chance at it—Jeem will pack up his marbles and go to Europe.

G'bye, Jeem!

Sam Snead, Ghezzi Win

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, May 29.—"Slammin' Sam" Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., "came from nowhere" on a rain and wind-swept course today to capture the fourth annual Inverness best-ball matches and grab $1,300 in prize money.

Ed. Dudley and Ky. Laffoon, who led until the last two rounds, were blasted from the peak this morning as Snead and Ghezzi turned in a best-ball round of 61, the tournament's best, for a 6-up victory. Dudley and Laffoon finished in a tie for second with Horton Smith and Harry Cooper, defending champions, who had gone into the last round with a three-point lead.

In addition to the $1,000 top prize, Ghezzi and Snead took $200 for scoring the most birdies, 21, on the last 54 holes, while the 61 best ball round was good for another $100.

Dick Metz and Gene Sarazen finished fourth, three points off the pace under the Inverness scoring system, which gives a team a plus for each hole it finishes up at the end of a round, and a minus for each hole down.

Jimmy Thompson and Tommy Armour were fifth, Lawson Little and Jimmy Demaret sixth, Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta seventh and Willie Goggin and Frank Walsh last.

Here's how they finished, the prize money, the strokes for the 126 holes, the birdies scored by each pair, and the strokes under par for the 126 holes:

T. Sherburne Upset Victor In Tourney

Young Officer Defeats Goubeau; Other Favorites Advance.

By Jack Munhall.

Lieut. Tom L. Sherburne, young Army War College officer and newcomer to local tennis, continued to force his introduction on favorites in the City of Washington tournament yesterday by producing his second upset in as many days at Edgemoor.

Sherburne, unseeded and unknown entry who eliminated seventh-seeded Billy Contreras Saturday in the first form reversal of the annual event, won over Maurice Goubeau, veteran public parks star, in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4. By blasting his heavily-backed rival off the courts in convincing fashion, Sherburne definitely established himself as a "dark horse" threat to the title vacated by Barney Welsh.

Though his victory was the only upset as singles and doubles play moved into the third round, several other favorites found the going rough before notching triumphs over lesser regarded foes.

Ritzenberg spotted Hugh Trigg a leg on thier set-to but finally won out, 2—6, 9—7, 6—3, and Howard suffered the ignominy of a love set licking before trouncing Charles Heacock 0—6, 6—2, 6—2.

Other seeded stars, including Hugh Lynch, James Farrin, Frank Shore, Ray Stocklinski and young Davie Johnsen easily advanced.

Steel Output Now Less Than Third Capacity

Trade Opinion Is That No Advance Will Occur Before Fall.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 29.—The magazine Steel reported today a "growing" opinion "that no forward movement may be expected until fall" in the iron and steel industry, which is operating at less than one-third of capacity.

In the fall automotive buying is expected to be resumed. In addition, the weekly review said, Government agencies' delay in approving steamship and railroad purchasing may be ended by that time.

"In addition to general adverse influences some seasonal factors are entering the picture, agricultural implement manufacturers tapering their production and the time for railroad buying being nearly over for this year," the review stated.

"No upturn in buying has appeared following announcement of prices for third quarter, incentive to cover for the future being absent."

The national production rate last week was reckoned at 28.5 per cent of capacity, a drop of 1.5 points from the previous week due to sharp contraction—8 points to 22—in the Pittsburgh district. Other district decreases were Buffalo, 4.5 points to 21 per cent; Cincinnati, 17 points to 28. Wheeling gained 3 points to 41 per cent; Birmingham, 6 to 69; Cleveland, 3 to 26, and Youngstown, 1 to 27.

Rates were unchanged at Chicago, 29; eastern Pennsylvania, 27; New England, 30; St. Louis, 33.3, and Detroit, 18.

Lumber Shipments Are 60% of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended May 21, 1938, stood at 54 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 60 per cent of average 1929 shippments, according to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association yesterday. Production was about 54 per cent of the corresponding week of 1939; shipments, about 56 per cent of that week's shipments.

Reported shipments were heavier in the week ended May 21, 1938, than in the preceding week; new orders and production were less. New business was 1 per cent below output; shipments 7 per cent above. All items in the week ended May 21, 1938, were appreciably lower than during the corresponding week of 1937.

National production reported for the 1938 week by 4 per cent fewer mills was 6 per cent below the output of the preceding week; shipments were 7 per cent above shipments and new orders were 3 per cent below orders of the previous week.

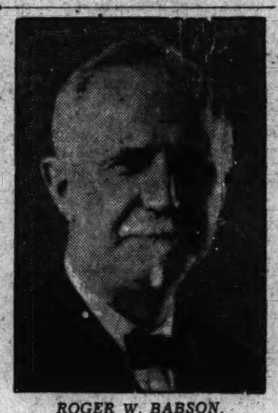
Coalition of Conservatives Can Win in 1940, Babson Says

Political Tide Against New Deal, He Says, Predicting It Will Lose 75 Seats in This Year's Elections.

By Roger W. Babson.

Babson Park, Mass., May 29.—The political tides are beginning to run against the New Deal. This is no partisan statement. It is merely a recognition of the inexorable law of action and reaction as applied to politics. A few months from now the midterm national elections will be held. Every member of the House, one-third of the Senate, 33 Governors, and a large number of State legislators will then be up for re-election. Straws in the wind, showing which way 1940 will go are bound to emerge from these November elections. In fact, from the spring primaries, we are already able to gain some idea of the trend.

Outstanding among these primaries was last week's vote in Pennsylvania—the second largest State in the Union, politically speaking. Here the defeat of John L. Lewis' candidate was the outstanding feature. A close second in importance was the unexpected landslide victory of Judge Arthur H. James for the Republican governorship nomination. The defeat of Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy for the Democratic nomination for Governor means that the Democratic voters of Pennsylvanian are no longer enthusiastic over the C. I. O. Above all, they do not want the C. I. O. in high political office.



ROGER W. BABSON.

Republican Primary.

Lieutenant Governor Kennedy is secretary-treasurer of John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers Union—which is the keystone in the arch of the C. I. O. Mr. Lewis staked his own political future on securing the nomination for Mr. Kennedy. More than that, the usually astute Jim Farley put the Administration out on a limb by giving an eleventh-hour indorsement to Kennedy. It was an implied White House command to the Democratic voters of Pennsylvania. And what happened? The voters administered a stinging rebuke to the President, to John L. Lewis and to the C. I. O.

This is only part of the picture, however. On the Republican side the nomination had been tacitly conceded by many observers to former Gov. Pinchot, erstwhile Progressive, and termed by his opponent, Judge James, as "half a New Dealer." The G. O. P. voters acted decisively. They rejected the so-called "liberal" Republican in favor of a man who had made his campaign a straight-from-the-shoulder hard-hitting fight against the Administration at Washington. Conceding all this, my readers may ask . . . "So what?"

G. O. P. and Pennsylvania.

Here is what: Impartial observers forecast the election of a Republican Governor in Pennsylvania in November. Further, they expect to see Gov. Earle defeated for the Senate by my friend Senator James J. Davis, who was nominated last week by the Republicans to succeed himself. Having in mind that the New Deal won a major victory in Pennsylvania less than two years ago, this would be a significant setback. Last week's results showed that both the Democrats and the Republicans of Pennsylvania want no more New Deal programs—whether in the guise of a C. I. O. official named Kennedy or a "liberal" Republican named Pinchot.

As I said at the opening of this article, the tides are running against the New Deal. Here is another forecast, although you must realize that politics is a difficult subject to put under the scalpel of the statistician. This prediction is that the New Deal will lose around 75 seats in the House next November. The Republicans in Congress are beginning to show signs of life for the first time since 1933. They will be a real fighting group in the next session. Allied with the anti-New Deal Democrats, they have an excellent chance of restoring the constitutional system of checks and balances between Congress, the White House and the Supreme Court.

"Coalition or Chaos."

This brings up sharply the question of 1940, particularly the presidential race. To me the issue is crystal clear—and Pennsylvania's primary results last week only serve to make me more certain of the situation. If the Republicans want to defeat the New Deal in 1940 and bring back a conservative administration to the Nation, they can do it. But they must form a coalition with the conservative Democrats. Both groups must unite on one man for their Presidential candidate and support him. First, the anti-New Deal Democrats must break away from the Rooseveltian "Democrats" and nominate one of their own men. Then, the G. O. P. should nominate the same conservative Democrat as its candidate.

Here are some possibilities: Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi; Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia, Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri; Senator Walter George, of Georgia, or Senator Josiah Bailey, of North Carolina. Any of these men can give the combined conservatives a victory over the New Deal candidate. If we are to avoid economic chaos in America we must elect men to public office who realize that dishonest politics, unbridled expenses and soaring taxes are choking industry and lowering living standards. We must repent our sins. If we do, big crops, low money rates, and new industries can give us the greatest prosperity America has ever seen.

N.Y. Bank Stocks Continue Decline

New York, May 29.—A further setback in the New York City bank stock market during the past week carried values down to the lowest levels since April 1, according to records compiled by Hoit, Rose & Troster. The aggregate market value of 16 leading issues on May 27 was $1,203,653,000, compared with $1,270,631,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of 5.27 per cent.

The current average yield of the 16 issues of 5.48 per cent compares with a yield of 5.19 per cent on May 20. The current market value is now 86 per cent of the known book value, compared with 91 per cent a week ago.

Insurance stocks also continued to register declines during the past week, the report stated. The aggregate market value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on May 27 amounted to $497,933,000, compared with $510,661,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of 2.49 per cent.

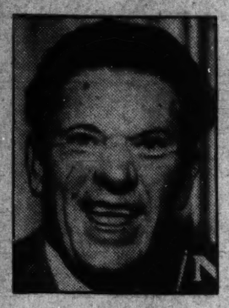
Bob Burns Says—



Business and military careers are a whole lot alike. No matter how smart you are in school you have'ta learn strategy by actual experience.

I know a doctor who sent his son to a medical school and when he graduated and came home, his father said, "Now, son, I'm gonna leave you in charge of my office while I take a two weeks' vacation."

When the father came home, the son greeted him proudly and says, "Father, while you were gone, I cured Mrs. Van Snoot's indigestion." The father said, "That's fine, son, but you've got a lot to learn—remember it was Mrs. Van Snoot's indigestion that sent you through college.

3 Who Served Under Dewey Place Wreath

Association Delegates Also Honor Wilson in Cathedral Rites.

In the quiet of Bethlehem Chapel in the Washington Cathedral three men in their sixties yesterday stood before the tomb of the naval commander who led them into action 40 years ago this month.

Capt. Max M. Goldman, of Philadelphia, who saw the dawn break over Manila Bay from the small cruiser, U. S. S. Concord, stepped forward and placed a wreath above the resting place of Admiral George E. Dewey. Capt. Goldman is commander of Capt. Joseph B. Coghlan Chapter, No. 4, Dewey Congressional Medal Men's Association.

A detail of sailors from the Navy Yard presented arms and Canon E. S. Dunlap read from the Book of Ecclesiastes, "Let us now praise famous men . . ."

Crossing the chapel, the party drew up before the sarcophagus of Woodrow Wilson. R. A. T. Morningstar, former master electrician at the Navy Yard and an honorary member of the Dewey association, laid a floral tribute near the remains of the war-time President. A bugler sounded "taps."

The 1,748 officers and men who destroyed the Spanish fleet at Manila Bay were all enrolled in the Dewey association, Capt. Goldman explained. About 350 are now alive, he said, and each year, on or near Memorial Day, are represented by a delegation in Bethlehem Chapel. Since virtually all the society's membership enlisted in the Navy during the World War, the annual exercises honor President Wilson as well as Admiral Dewey.

Other members of the association present yesterday were Augustus Gumpert, of Washington, who saw service at Manila Bay on the U. S. S. Boston, and Edward Snelgrove, from New Jersey, stationed on the U. S. S. Baltimore.

Maine Treasurer Vanishes at Sea

Bangor, Me., May 29 (U.P.).—Coast Guardsmen tonight were searching Bucks Cove waters, off South Brooksville, for the body of Bird F. Cole, of Bangor, Penobscot County treasurer.

A week-end guest aboard former County Attorney James Maxwell's 24-foot cruiser, Cole disappeared sometime Saturday night or early today. It was believed he either fell or slipped from the yacht's deck.

French Air Chief, Staff Visit Britain

London, May 29 (U.P.).—Gen. Joseph Vuillemin, chief of France's "army of the air," and five of his staff officers arrived in England by plane today to arrange for coordination of the British and French air fleets under the Anglo-French unwritten military pact.

Vuillemin, a veteran flier and leader of the "Black Squadron" mass flight over Africa, will spend a week inspecting key aviation factories and air bases throughout the country.

3 Burned to Death As Truck Crashes

Canton, Me., May 29 (U.P.).—Three persons were burned to death early today when a beer truck burst into flames after swerving from Rumford highway. Victims were Donald Hewey, 26, Bangor, driver; Thomas Garceau, 27, Farmington, helper, and a woman identified as a Mrs. Grant, of Auburn. The truck failed to negotiate a sharp curve and hurtled into a ditch.

French Investigating Nazi Flights Over Fort

Metz, France, May 29 (A.P.).—French military authorities opened an official investigation today into flights by German planes over the Maginot Line fortifications near the French town of Sarreguemines, on the Franco-German border.

Frontier guards reported German planes flew over the forbidden area three times within five days. Each time a warning was sent to Metz Airport but by the time French border patrol planes reached the fortified zone the Germans had returned to their own side.

500,000 Hear Pope Ask God To Give Peace

Pius' Broadcast Closes 34th Eucharistic Congress in Budapest.

By the Associated Press.

Castel Gandolfo, Italy, May 29.—Pope Pius XI prayed today for divine mercy to "dispel lowering clouds which seem to portend new tempests" in a broadcast of apostolic blessing to the closing session of the Thirty-fourth Eucharistic Congress in Budapest.

The Pontiff, who will be 81 on Tuesday, spoke in Latin for 10 minutes.

His voice was strong until just before the blessing when he faltered over a reference to "Those who have pitiably wandered away from Christ Our Lord."

The Pope said he prayed his "dear sons of Hungary" should enjoy "not only that tranquillity without which there is no true peace but also that dignity of peace which is due the Hungarian people."

Hopes for Better Times.

He continued:

"We beseech the Redeemer by His divine power to foster, increase and confirm consolations which are not lacking and the hope of better times which even now we anticipate.

"May He in His divine mercy still anxieties which perturbs the hearts of men and, with rays of supernal light, dispel lowering clouds which seem to portend new tempests."

500,000 Hear.

Budapest, May 29 (A.P.).—An estimated 500,000 worshipers in Heroes Square listened today to Pope Pius' broadcast peace message and the apostolic blessing on the final day of the Thirty-fourth Eucharistic Congress.

Thousands knelt.

The address brought to a climax the events and colorful ceremonies of the congress which was opened last Wednesday by the Papal Legate, Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli.

De Valera Seeking Majority in Dail

Dublin, May 29 (A.P.).—American-born Prime Minister Eamon de Valera is seeking a clear-cut governing majority in the Dail Eireann, or House of Representatives, in a general election June 17.

Calling the agreement, signed April 25 between Great Britain and Ireland, an important milestone in the country's short independent history, he launched today a personal drive for a freer hand in attempts to nurse agriculture back to life and build up industry.

Former President William T. Cosgrave's Fine Gael Party and the Labor opposition have taken up the cry: "Down with Dev!"

Maryland Ex-Administrator Proposes Move at Jewish Parley.

The division of needy into employables and unemployables "is not a statesmanlike approach" to the Nation's relief problem Harry Greenstein, president of National Conference of Jewish Social Welfare, declared yesterday at a convention session in the Willard.

Criticizing "any specialized form of categorical aid," Greenstein, former relief administrator for Maryland, advocated "one additional broad category to be included in the social security act, flexible enough to provide for all forms of direct relief which might be needed, with appropriations by the Federal Government on a matching basis."

The speaker characterized resumption of direct Federal relief appropriations as "a supplement to and not a substitute for a works program."

"Until it is possible for a mass work program to take care of the needy," he asserted, "then the least we can do is to take care of the many gaps which exist through a partnership of Federal and State efforts."

Speaking before a session of Jewish educators, Dr. Salo Baron, Hebrew historian, attacked Nazi doctrines of racial superiority. "Our knowledge of what constitutes a race is still in its prescientific stage," he said.

"A thoroughly socialized democracy," to be achieved "without force and violence and bloodshed," was held up as the goal of American Jewry in a speech last night by the Rev. Dr. Sidney E. Goldstein, of Jewish Institute of Religion in New York.

Many conference delegates yesterday attended a special meeting in the Willard called by the National Co-ordinating Committee for German Refugees, where assurance of the American Government's co-operation in refugee evacuation was given by Prof. Joseph P. Chamberlain, member of President Roosevelt's Advisory Committee on Political Refugees.

Aid to refugees emigrating from central Europe can be given by the 32 nations interested in the question "without any change in their current immigration policies," Dr. Chamberlain declared.

Pachyderms a Pest.

Paris, May 29 (U.P.).—Rampaging elephants and hippopotami, crazed by an unusual drought and heat wave, have attacked colonists and destroyed property on French plantations in the vicinity of Lake Chad (Chad territory in French equatorial Africa), according to official dispatches reaching the ministry of colonies.

Franco Clears Enemy From Valencia Road

Loyalists Order Refugees to Leave City's Bomb Shelters for Workers.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, May 29.—Heavy insurgent assaults on the inland extremity of the Teruel-to-the-sea line shattered Spanish government defenses today, giving the attackers firm foothold on the road to the coast and Valencia.

Civil authorities ordered forced evacuation of all refugees from Valencia's crowded port section today because of continued insurgent air raids.

It was explained refugees from the war zones had overtaxed bomb-proof shelters for factory workers. They were ordered to leave the area within eight days.

An insurgent column, marching five miles south from Teruel, took possession of the village of Aldehuela, then wheeled to the east against government forces clinging to mountainous positions near Puerto Escandon.

A dispatch from Zaragoza said the government was concentrating fresh forces for assault on a bridgehead at the Segre River near Balaguer and on Tremp, Catalonian hydroelectric center. Balaguer is 70 miles west-northwest and Tremp 85 miles northwest of Barcelona.

Insurgents said the week-old offensive both at Tremp and Balaguer had been futile despite the efficiency of the attackers' artillery. The insurgents declared the artillerymen were French, commanded by French officers. A new type of projectile of 105-millimeter (4.13-inch) caliber, marked as of French manufacture, was reported used.

The insurgents also reported rifles used by the attacking infantrymen were of Czechoslovak manufacture.

Government losses, the insurgents in Zaragoza said, included two complete divisions, the seventy-second and sixtieth, with 5,000 dead and 25,000 wounded.

Insurgent Aragonese infantrymen, defending the bridgehead, used 3,000 bottles of gasoline to repulse the week of repeated tank attacks, dashing the bottles on the tanks and then putting torches to them. Forty-two tanks were reported disabled in that fashion.

Barcelona Bombed.

Four air raid alarms between 11 p. m. yesterday and noon today sent Barcelona residents scurrying for shelter, but the city was only bombed twice with little damage and no reported casualties.

Italy Hails Rebel Cause.

Rome, May 29 (A.P.).—Italy gave new testimony of her enthusiasm for the cause of insurgent Spain today in day-long celebration of "Italo-Spanish solidarity."

The principal event was a tremendous theater mass meeting attended by Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano and the insurgent Spanish Ambassadors to Rome and the Holy See.

Also present was a mission headed by insurgent Gen. Millan Astray, sent by Gen. Franco.

Mexican Rebels' El Salto Base Falls To Federal Forces

San Luis Potosi, Mexico, May 29 (U.P.).—Federal forces have occupied El Salto, one of the headquarters of followers of rebel Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, it was announced tonight.

Officials here said they considered the campaign to wipe out the last traces of the uprising virtually terminated, but admitted pacification of villages in remote areas may require several weeks.

A dozen army airplanes resumed their drive to destroy rebel air bases. Government pilots returning from flights reported white flags were being displayed by the populace in many sections.

Cedillo was believed to be in hiding in the northern hills, and his chances of escape were reported narrowed by reports of disabling of his only remaining airplane.

Be Soldiers Again, Petain Admonishes

Perigueux, France, May 29 (A.P.).—Marshal Henri Petain, the hero of Verdun, today appealed to war veterans to shake off their post-war lethargy and revive "the military virtues you practiced during the world conflict."

The dean of France's wartime army chieftains, his voice shaking with emotion, told a veterans' meeting that while Frenchmen had forgotten the last war in a "beatific torpor," Germany's armies have "surpassed in power everything conceived of in the military world up to the present.
